POEMS.

THE LOST BOWER.

I.

IN the pleasant orchard-closes,
'God bless all our gains,' say we;
But 'May God bless all our losses,'
Better suits with our degree.
Listen, gentle—ay, and simple! listen, children on the knee!

II.

Green the land is where my daily
Steps in jocund childhood played,
Dimpled close with hill and valley,
Dappled very close with shade;
Summer-snow of apple-blossoms running up from glade to glade.

III.

There is one hill I see nearer
In my vision of the rest;
And a little wood seems clearer
As it climbeth from the west,
Sideway from the tree-locked valley, to the airy upland crest.

IV.

Small the wood is. green with hazels,
And, completing the ascent,
Where the wind blows and sun dazzles
Thrills in leafy tremblement,
Like a heart that after climbing beateth quickly through content.

V.

Not a step the wood advances
O'er the open hill-top's bound;
There, in green arrest, the branches
See their image on the ground:
You may walk beneath them smiling, glad with sight and glad with sound.

VI.

For you harken on your right hand,
How the birds do leap and call
In the greenwood, out of sight and
Out of reach and fear of all;
And the squirrels crack the filberts through their cheerful madrigal.

VII.

On your left, the sheep are cropping
The slant grass and daisies pale,
And five apple-trees stand dropping
Separate shadows toward the vale
Over which, in choral silence, the hills look you their ‘All hail!’

VIII.

Far out, kindled by each other,
Shining hills on hills arise,
Close as brother leans to brother
When they press beneath the eyes
Of some father praying blessings from the gifts of paradise.

IX.

While beyond, above them mounted,
And above their woods alsò,
Malvern hills, for mountains counted
Not unduly, loom a-row—
Keepers of Piers Plowman’s visions through the sunshine and the snow.*

X.

Yet, in childhood, little prized I
That fair walk and far survey;
’Twas a straight walk unadvised by

* The Malvern Hills of Worcestershire are the scene of Langlande’s visions, and thus present the earliest classic ground of English poetry.

THE LOST BOWER.

The least mischief worth a nay ;
Up and down—as dull as grammar on the eve of holiday.

XI.

But the wood, all close and clenching
Bough in bough and root in root,—
No more sky (for over-branching)
At your head than at your foot,—
Oh, the wood drew me within it by a glamour past dispute !

XII.

Few and broken paths showed through it,
Where the sheep had tried to run,—
Forced with snowy wool to strew it
Round the thickets, when anon
They, with silly thorn-pricked noses, bleated back into the sun.

XIII.

But my childish heart beat stronger
Than those thickets dared to grow :
I could pierce them ! I could longer
Travel on, methought, than so :
Sheep for sheep-paths ! braver children climb and creep where they would go.

XIV.

And the poets wander, said I,
Over places all as rude :

Bold Rinaldo's lovely lady
Sate to meet him in a wood :
Rosalinda, like a fountain, laughed out pure with solitude.

XV.

And if Chaucer had not travelled
Through a forest by a well,
He had never dreamt nor marvelled
At those ladies fair and fell
Who lived smiling without loving in their island-citadel.

XVI.

Thus I thought of the old singers
And took courage from their song,
Till my little struggling fingers
Tore asunder gyve and thong
Of the brambles which entrapped me, and the barrier branches strong.

XVII.

On a day, such pastime keeping,
With a fawn's heart debonair,
Under-crawling, overleaping
Thorns that prick and boughs that bear,
I stood suddenly astonished—I was gladdened unaware.

XVIII.

From the place I stood in, floated
Back the covert dim and close,
And the open ground was coated

Carpet-smooth with grass and moss,
And the blue-bell's purple presence signed it worthily across.

XIX.

Here a linden-tree stood, brightning
All adown its silver rind;
For as some trees draw the lightning,
So this tree, unto my mind,
Drew to earth the blessed sunshine from the sky where it was shrined.

XX.

Tall the linden-tree, and near it
An old hawthorn also grew;
And wood-ivy like a spirit
Hovered dimly round the two,
Shaping thence that bower of beauty which I sing of thus to you.

XXI.

'Twas a bower for garden fitter
Than for any woodland wide:
Though a fresh and dewy glitter
Struck it through from side to side,
Shaped and shaven was the freshness, as by garden-cunning plied.

XXII.

Oh, a lady might have come there,
Hooded fairly like her hawk,
With a book or lute in summer,
And a hope of sweeter talk,— Listening less to her own music than for footsteps on the walk !

XXIII.

But that bower appeared a marvel
In the wildness of the place ;
With such seeming art and travail,
Finely fixed and fitted was Leaf to leaf, the dark-green ivy, to the summit from the base.

XXIV.

And the ivy veined and glossy
Was enwrought with eglantine ;
And the wild hop fibred closely,
And the large-leaved columbine,
Arch of door and window-mullion, did right sylvanly entwine.

XXV.

Rose-trees either side the door were Growing lithe and growing tall,
Each one set a summer warder
For the keeping of the hall,—
With a red rose and a white rose, leaning, nodding at the wall.

XXVI.

As I entered, mosses hushing
 Stole all noises from my foot;
 And a green elastic cushion,
 Clasped within the linden's root,
 Took me in a chair of silence very rare and absolute.

XXVII.

All the floor was paved with glory,
 Greenly, silently inlaid
 (Through quick motions made before me)
 With fair counterparts in shade
 Of the fair serrated ivy-leaves which slanted overhead.

XXVIII.

'Is such pavement in a palace?'
 So I questioned in my thought:
 The sun, shining through the chalice
 Of the red rose hung without,
 Threw within a red libation, like an answer to my doubt.

XXIX.

At the same time, on the linen
 Of my childish lap there fell
 Two white may-leaves, downward winning
 Through the ceiling's miracle,
 From a blossom, like an angel, out of sight yet blessing well.

XXX.

Down to floor and up to ceiling
 Quick I turned my childish face,
 With an innocent appealing
 For the secret of the place
 To the trees, which surely knew it in partaking of the grace.

XXXI.

Where's no foot of human creature
 How could reach a human hand?
 And if this be work of nature,
 Why has nature turned so bland,
 Breaking off from other wild-work? It was hard to understand.

XXXII.

Was she weary of rough-doing,
 Of the bramble and the thorn?
 Did she pause in tender rueing
 Here of all her sylvan scorn?
 Or in mock of art's deceiving was the sudden mild-ness worn?

XXXIII.

Or could this same bower (I fancied)
 Be the work of Dryad strong,
 Who, surviving all that chanced
 In the world's old pagan wrong,
 Lay hid, feeding in the woodland on the last true poet's song?

XXXIV.

Or was this the house of fairies,
 Left, because of the rough ways,
 Unassoiled by Ave Marys
 Which the passing pilgrim prays,
 And beyond St. Catherine's chiming on the blessed Sabbath days?

XXXV.

So, young muser, I sate listening
 To my fancy's wildest word:
 On a sudden, through the glistening
 Leaves around, a little stirred,
 Came a sound, a sense of music which was rather felt than heard.

XXXVI.

Softly, finely, it inwound me;
 From the world it shut me in,—
 Like a fountain, falling round me,
 Which with silver waters thin
 Clips a little water Naiad sitting smilingly within.

XXXVII.

Whence the music came, who knoweth?
 I know nothing: but indeed
 Pan or Faunus never bloweth
 So much sweetness from a reed
 Which has sucked the milk of waters at the oldest riverhead.

XXXVIII.

Never lark the sun can waken
 With such sweetness ! when the lark,
 The high planets overtaking
 In the half-evanished Dark,
 Casts his singing to their singing, like an arrow to the mark.

XXXIX.

Never nightingale so singeth :
 Oh, she leans on thorny tree
 And her poet-song she flingeth
 Over pain to victory !
 Yet she never sings such music,—or she sings it not to me.

XL.

Never blackbirds, never thrushes
 Nor small finches sing as sweet,
 When the sun strikes through the bushes
 To their crimson clinging feet,
 And their pretty eyes look sideways to the summer heavens complete.

XLI.

If it were a bird, it seem'd
 Most like Chaucer's, which, in sooth,
 He of green and azure dream'd,
 While it sate in spirit-ruth
 On that bier of a crowned lady, singing nigh her silent mouth

XLII.

If it were a bird?—ah, sceptic,
 Give me 'yea' or give me 'nay'—
 Though my soul were nympholeptic
 As I heard that virëlay,
 You may stoop your pride to pardon, for my sin is far away!

XLIII.

I rose up in exaltation
 And an inward trembling heat,
 And (it seemed) in geste of passion
 Dropped the music to my feet
 Like a garment rustling downwards—such a silence followed it!

XLIV.

Heart and head beat through the quiet
 Full and heavily, though slower:
 In the song, I think, and by it,
 Mystic Presences of power
 Had up-snatched me to the Timeless, then returned me to the Hour.

XLV

In a child-abstraction lifted,
 Straightway from the bower I past,
 Foot and soul being dimly drifted
 Through the greenwood, till, at last,
 In the hill-top's open sunshine I all consciously was cast.

XLVI.

Face to face with the true mountains
I stood silently and still,
Drawing strength from fancy's dauntings,
From the air about the hill
And from Nature's open mercies and most debonair goodwill.

XLVII.

Oh, the golden-hearted daisies
Witnessed there, before my youth,
To the truth of things, with praises
Of the beauty of the truth ;
And I woke to Nature's real, laughing joyfully for both.

XLVIII.

And I said within me, laughing,
I have found a bower to-day,
A green lusus, fashioned half in
Chance and half in Nature's play,
And a little bird sings nigh it, I will nevermore missay.

XLIX.

Henceforth, I will be the fairy
Of this bower not built by one ;
I will go there, sad or merry,
With each morning's benison,
And the bird shall be my harper in the dream-hall I have won.

L.

So I said. But the next morning,
(—Child, look up into my face—
'Ware, oh sceptic, of your scorning!
This is truth in its pure grace!)
The next morning, all had vanished, or my wandering missed the place.

LI.

Bring an oath most sylvan-holy,
And upon it swear me true—
By the wind-bells swinging slowly
Their mute curfews in the dew,
By the advent of the snow-drop, by the rosemary and rue,—

LII.

I affirm by all or any,
Let the cause be charm or chance,
That my wandering searches many
Missed the bower of my romance—
That I nevermore upon it turned my mortal countenance.

LIII.

I affirm that, since I lost it,
Never bower has seemed so fair;
Never garden-creeper crossed it
With so deft and brave an air,
Never bird sung in the summer, as I saw and heard them there.

LIV.

Day by day, with new desire,
Toward my wood I ran in faith,
Under leaf and over brier,
Through the thickets, out of breath ;
Like the prince who rescued Beauty from the sleep as long as death.

LV.

But his sword of mettle clash'd,
And his arm smote strong, I ween,
And her dreaming spirit flash'd
Through her body's fair white screen.
And the light thereof might guide him up the cedar alleys green :

LVI.

But for me, I saw no splendour—
All my sword was my child-heart ;
And the wood refused surrender
Of that bower it held apart,
Safe as Œdipus's grave-place 'mid Colone's olives swart.

LVII.

As Aladdin sought the basements
His fair palace rose upon,
And the four-and-twenty casements
Which gave answers to the sun ;
So, in wilderment of gazing, I looked up and I looked down.

LVIII.

Years have vanished since, as wholly
 As the little bower did then;
 And you call it tender folly
 That such thoughts should come again?
 Ah, I cannot change this sighing for your smiling, brother men!

LIX.

For this loss it did prefigure
 Other loss of better good,
 When my soul, in spirit-vigour
 And in ripened womanhood,
 Fell from visions of more beauty than an arbour in a wood.

LX.

I have lost—oh, many a pleasure,
 Many a hope and many a power—
 Studious health and merry leisure,
 The first dew on the first flower!
 But the first of all my losses was the losing of the bower.

LXI.

I have lost the dream of Doing,
 And the other dream of Done,
 The first spring in the pursuing,
 The first pride in the Begun,—
 First recoil from incompleteness, in the face of what is won—

LXII.

Exaltations in the far light
Where some cottage only is ;
Mild dejections in the starlight,
Which the sadder-hearted miss ;
And the child-cheek blushing scarlet for the very shame of bliss.

LXIII.

I have lost the sound child-sleeping
Which the thunder could not break ;
Something too of the strong leaping
Of the staglike heart awake,
Which the pale is low for keeping in the road it ought to take.

LXIV.

Some respect to social fictions
Has been also lost by me ;
And some generous genuflexions,
Which my spirit offered free
To the pleasant old conventions of our false humanity.

LXV.

All my losses did I tell you,
Ye perchance would look away ;—
Ye would answer me, ' Farewell ! you
Make sad company to-day,
And your tears are falling faster than the bitter words you say.'

LXVI.

For God placed me like a dial
In the open ground with power,
And my heart had for its trial
All the sun and all the shower:
And I suffered many losses,—and my first was of the bower.

LXVII.

Laugh you? If that loss of mine be
Of no heavy-seeming weight—
When the cone falls from the pine-tree,
The young children laugh thereat;
Yet the wind that struck it, riseth, and the tempest shall be great.

LXVIII.

One who knew me in my childhood
In the glamour and the game,
Looking on me long and mild, would Never know me for the same.
Come, unchanging recollections, where those changes overcame!

LXIX.

By this couch I weakly lie on,
While I count my memories,—
Through the fingers which, still sighing,
I press closely on mine eyes,—
Clear as once beneath the sunshine, I behold the bower arise.

LXX.

Springs the linden-tree as greenly,
 Stroked with light adown its rind;
 And the ivy-leaves serenely
 Each in either entertwined;
 And the rose-trees at the doorway, they have neither grown nor pined.

LXXI.

From those overblown faint roses
 Not a leaf appeareth shed,
 And that little bud discloses
 Not a thorn's-breadth more of red
 For the winters and the summers which have passed me overhead.

LXXII.

And that music overfloweth,
 Sudden sweet, the sylvan eaves:
 Thrush or nightingale—who knoweth?
 Fay or Faunus—who believes?
 But my heart still trembles in me to the trembling of the leaves.

LXXIII.

Is the bower lost, then? who sayeth
 That the bower indeed is lost?
 Hark! my spirit in it prayeth
 Through the sunshine and the frost,—
 And the prayer preserves it greenly, to the last and uttermost.

LXXIV.

Till another open for me
In God's Eden-land unknown,
With an angel at the doorway,
White with gazing at His Throne ;
And a saint's voice in the palm-trees, singing—' All is lost . . . and won !'

A SONG AGAINST SINGING.

TO E. J. H.

I.

THEY bid me sing to thee,
Thou golden-haired and silver-voicëd child—
With lips by no worse sigh than sleep's defiled—
With eyes unknowing how tears dim the sight,
And feet all trembling at the new delight
Treaders of earth to be!

II.

Ah no! the lark may bring
A song to thee from out the morning cloud,
The merry river from its lilies bowed,
The brisk rain from the trees, the lucky wind
That half doth make its music, half doth find,—
But I—I may not sing.

III.

How could I think it right,
New-comer on our earth as, Sweet, thou art,
To bring a verse from out an human heart
Made heavy with accumulated tears,
And cross with such amount of weary years
Thy day-sum of delight?

IV.

Even if the verse were said,
Thou, who wouldst clap thy tiny hands to hear
The wind or rain, gay bird or river clear,
Wouldst, at that sound of sad humanities,
Upturn thy bright uncomprehending eyes
And bid me play instead.

V.

Therefore no song of mine,—
But prayer in place of singing; prayer that would Commend thee to the new-creating God
Whose gift is childhood's heart without its stain
Of weakness, ignorance, and changing vain—
That gift of God be thine!

VI.

So wilt thou aye be young,
In lovelier childhood than thy shining brow
And pretty winning accents make thee now:

Yea, sweeter than this scarce articulate sound
(How sweet!) of 'father,' 'mother,' shall be found
The ABBA on thy tongue.

VII.

And so, as years shall chase
Each other's shadows, thou wilt less resemble
Thy fellows of the earth who toil and tremble,
Than him thou seest not, thine angel bold
Yet meek, whose ever-lifted eyes behold
The Ever-loving's face.

WINE OF CYPRUS.

GIVEN TO ME BY H. S. BOYD, AUTHOR OF "SELECT PASSAGES FROM THE GREEK FATHERS," ETC..

TO WHOM THESE STANZAS ARE ADDRESSED.

I.

IF old Bacchus were the speaker
He would tell you with a sigh,
Of the Cyprus in this beaker
I am sipping like a fly,—
Like a fly or gnat on Ida
At the hour of goblet-pledge,
By queen Juno brushed aside, a
Full white arm-sweep, from the edge.

II.

Sooth, the drinking should be ampler
When the drink is so divine,
And some deep-mouthed Greek exemplar
Would become your Cyprus wine:
Cyclops' mouth might plunge aright in,
While his one eye over-leered,
Nor too large were mouth of Titan
Drinking rivers down his beard.

III.

Pan might dip his head so deep in,
That his ears alone pricked out,
Fauns around him pressing, leaping,
Each one pointing to his throat:
While the Naiads, like Bacchantes,
Wild, with urns thrown out to waste,
Cry, 'O earth, that thou wouldst grant us
Springs to keep, of such a taste!'

IV.

But for me, I am not worthy
After gods and Greeks to drink,
And my lips are pale and earthy
To go bathing from this brink:
Since you heard them speak the last time,
They have faded from their blooms,
And the laughter of my pastime
Has learnt silence at the tombs.

V.

Ah, my friend! the antique drinkers
Crowned the cup and crowned the brow.
Can I answer the old thinkers
In the forms they thought of, now?
Who will fetch from garden-closes
Some new garlands while I speak,
That the forehead, crowned with roses,
May strike scarlet down the cheek?

VI.

Do not mock me ! with my mortal,
Suits no wreath again, indeed ;
I am sad-voiced as the turtle
Which Anacreon used to feed :
Yet as that same bird demurely
Wet her beak in cup of his,
So, without a garland, surely
I may touch the brim of this.

VII.

Go,—let others praise the Chian !
This is soft as Muses' string,
This is tawny as Rhea's lion,
This is rapid as his spring,
Bright as Paphia's eyes e'er met us,
Light as ever trod her feet ;
And the brown bees of Hymettus
Make their honey not so sweet.

VIII.

Very copious are my praises,
Though I sip it like a fly !
Ah—but, sipping,—times and places
Change before me suddenly :
As Ulysses' old libation
Drew the ghosts from every part,
So your Cyprus wine, dear Grecian,
Stirs the Hades of my heart.

IX.

And I think of those long mornings
Which my thought goes far to seek,
When, betwixt the folio's turnings,
Solemn flowed the rhythmic Greek :
Past the pane the mountain spreading,
Swept the sheep's-bell's tinkling noise,
While a girlish voice was reading,
Somewhat low for ais and ous.

X.

Then, what golden hours were for us !
While we sate together there,
How the white vests of the chorus
Seemed to wave up a live air !
How the cothurns trod majestic
Down the deep iambic lines,
And the rolling anapæstic
Curled like vapour over shrines !

XI.

Oh, our Æschylus, the thunderous,
How he arove the bolted breath
Through the cloud, to wedge it ponderous
In the gnarléd oak beneath !
Oh, our Sophocles, the royal,
Who was born to monarch's place
And who made the whole world loyal,
Less by kingly power than grace !

XII.

Our Euripides, the human,
With his droppings of warm tears,
And his touches of things common
Till they rose to touch the spheres !
Our Theocritus, our Bion,
And our Pindar's shining goals !—
These were cup-bearers undying,
Of the wine that's meant for souls.

XIII.

And my Plato, the divine one,
If men know the gods aright
By their motions as they shine on
With a glorious trail of light !
And your noble Christian bishops,
Who mouthed grandly the last Greek
Though the sponges on their hyssops
Were distent with wine—too weak.

XIV.

Yet, your Chrysostom, you praised him
As a liberal mouth of gold ;
And your Basil, you upraised him
To the height of speakers old :
And we both praised Heliodorus
For his secret of pure lies,—
Who forged first his link'd stories
In the heat of lady's eyes.

XV.

And we both praised your Synesius
For the fire shot up his odes,
Though the Church was scarce propitious
As he whistled dogs and gods.
And we both praised Nazianzen
For the fervid heart and speech :
Only I eschewed his glancing
At the lyre hung out of reach.

XVI.

Do you mind that deed of Atê
Which you bound me to so fast,—
Reading ‘De Virginitate,’
From the first line to the last ?
How I said at ending, solemn
As I turned and looked at you,
That St. Simeon on the column
Had had somewhat less to do ?

XVII.

For we sometimes gently wrangled,
Very gently, be it said,
Since our thoughts were disentangled
By no breaking of the thread !
And I charged you with extortions
On the nobler fames of old—
Ay, and sometimes thought your Porsons
Stained the purple they would fold.

XVIII.

For the rest—a mystic moaning,
Kept Cassandra at the gate,
With wild eyes the vision shone in,
And wide nostrils scenting fate.
And Prometheus, bound in passion
By brute Force to the blind stone,
Showed us looks of invocation
Turned to ocean and the sun.

XIX.

And Medea we saw burning
At her nature's planted stake :
And proud Œdipus fate-scorning
While the cloud came on to break—
While the cloud came on slow, slower,
Till he stood discrowned, resigned !—
But the reader's voice dropped lower
When the poet called him BLIND.

XX.

Ah, my gossip ! you were older,
And more learned, and a man !
Yet that shadow, the enfolder
Of your quiet eyelids, ran
Both our spirits to one level ;
And I turned from hill and lea
And the summer-sun's green revel,
To your eyes that could not see.

XXI.

Now Christ bless you with the one light
Which goes shining night and day!
May the flowers which grow in sunlight
Shed their fragrance in your way!
Is it not right to remember
All your kindness, friend of mine,
When we two sate in the chamber,
And the poets poured us wine?

XXII.

So, to come back to the drinking
Of this Cyprus,—it is well,
But those memories, to my thinking
Make a better œnomel;
And whoever be the speaker,
None can murmur with a sigh
That, in drinking from that beaker.
I am sipping like a fly.

A RHAPSODY OF LIFE'S PROGRESS.

‘Fill all the stops of life with tuneful breath.’

POEMS ON MAN, BY CORNELIUS MATHEWS.*

I.

WE are borne into life—it is sweet, it is strange.
We lie still on the knee of a mild Mystery
Which smiles with a change ;
But we doubt not of changes, we know not of spaces,
The Heavens seem as near as our own mother's face is,
And we think we could touch all the stars that we see ;
And the milk of our mother is white on our mouth ;
And, with small childish hands, we are turning around
The apple of Life which another has found ;
It is warm with our touch, not with sun of the south,
And we count, as we turn it, the red side for four.

O Life, O Beyond,
Thou art sweet, thou art strange evermore !

* A small volume, by an American poet—as remarkable in thought and manner for a vital sinewy vigour, as the right arm of Pathfinder. 1844.

II.

Then all things look strange in the pure golden æther :
We walk through the gardens with hands linked together,
And the lilies look large as the trees ;
And as loud as the birds, sing the bloom-loving bees,
And the birds sing like angels, so mystical-fine,
And the cedars are brushing the archangels' feet,
And time is eternity, love is divine,
And the world is complete.
Now, God bless the child,—father, mother, respond :
O Life, O Beyond,
Thou art strange, thou art sweet.

III.

Then we leap on the earth with the armour of youth,
And the earth rings again ;
And we breathe out, 'O beauty!' we cry out, 'O truth !'
And the bloom of our lips drops with wine,
And our blood runs amazed 'neath the calm hyaline ;
The earth cleaves to the foot, the sun burns to the brain,—
What is this exultation ? and what this despair ?—
The strong pleasure is smiting the nerves into pain,
And we drop from the Fair as we climb to the Fair,
And we lie in a trance at its feet ;
And the breath of an angel cold-piercing the air
Breathes fresh on our faces in swoon,
And we think him so near he is this side the sun,

And we wake to a whisper self-murmured and fond,
O Life, O Beyond,
Thou art strange, thou art sweet!

IV.

And the winds and the waters in pastoral measures
Go winding around us, with roll upon roll,
Till the soul lies within in a circle of pleasures

Which hideth the soul :

And we run with the stag, and we leap with the horse,
And we swim with the fish through the broad water-
course,

And we strike with the falcon, and hunt with the hound,
And the joy which is in us flies out by a wound.

And we shout so aloud, ' We exult, we rejoice,'
That we lose the low moan of our brothers around :
And we shout so adeep down creation's profound,

We are deaf to God's voice.

And we bind the rose-garland on forehead and ears

Yet we are not ashamed,

And the dew of the roses that runneth unblamed

Down our cheeks, is not taken for tears.

Help us, God ! trust us, man, love us, woman ! ' I hold
Thy small head in my hands,—with its grapelets of gold
Growing bright through my fingers,—like altar for oath,
'Neath the vast golden spaces like witnessing faces
That watch the eternity strong in the troth—

I love thee, I leave thee,

Live for thee, die for thee !

I prove thee, deceive thee,
Undo evermore thee !

Help me, God ! slay me, man !—one is mourning for the dead,
And we stand up though young near the funeral-sheet
Which covers old Cæsar and old Pharamond,
And death is so nigh us, life cools from its heat.

O Life, O Beyond,
Art thou fair, art thou sweet ?

v.

Then we act to a purpose, we spring up erect :
We will tame the wild mouths of the wilderness-steeds.
We will plough up the deep in the ships double-decked.
We will build the great cities, and do the great deeds.
Strike the steel upon steel, strike the soul upon soul.
Strike the dole on the weal, overcoming the dole.
Let the cloud meet the cloud in a grand thunder-roll !
'While the eagle of Thought rides the tempest in scorn.
Who cares if the lightning is burning the corn ?

Let us sit on the thrones
In a purple sublimity,
And grind down men's bones
To a pale unanimity.

Speed me, God ! serve me, man ! I am god over men :
When I speak in my cloud, none shall answer again ;
'Neath the stripe and the bond,
Lie and mourn at my feet !'

O Life, O Beyond,
Thou art strange, thou art sweet !

VI.

Then we grow into thought, and withinward ascensions

Touch the bounds of our Being.

We lie in the dark here, swathed doubly around

With our sensual relations and social conventions,

Yet are 'ware of a sight, yet are 'ware of a sound

Beyond Hearing and Seeing,—

Are aware that a Hades rolls deep on all sides

With its infinite tides

About and above us,—until the strong arch

Of our life creaks and bends as if ready for falling,

And through the dim rolling we hear the sweet calling

Of spirits that speak in a soft under-tongue

The sense of the mystical march :

And we cry to them softly, 'Come nearer, come nearer

And lift up the lap of this dark, and speak clearer,

And teach us the song that ye sung !'

And we smile in our thought as they answer or no,

For to dream of a sweetness is sweet as to know.

Wonders breathe in our face

And we ask not their name ;

Love takes all the blame

Of the world's prison-place ;

And we sing back the songs as we guess them, aloud,

And we send up the lark of our music that cuts

Untired through the cloud

To beat with its wings at the lattice Heaven shuts ;

Yet the angels look down and the mortals look up

As the little wings beat,

And the poet is blessed with their pity or hope.
'Twixt the heavens and the earth can a poet despond?

O Life, O Beyond,
Thou art strange, thou art sweet!

VII.

Then we wring from our souls their applicative strength,
And bend to the cord the strong bow of our ken,
And bringing our lives to the level of others
Hold the cup we have filled, to their uses at length.
'Help me, God! love me, man! I am man among men

And my life is a pledge
Of the ease of another's!

From the fire and the water we drive out the steam,
With a rush and a roar and the speed of a dream:
And the car without horses, the car without wings,

Roars onward and flies

On its grey iron edge

'Neath the heat of a Thought sitting still in our eyes:
And our hand knots in air, with the bridge that it flings,
Two peaks far disrupted by ocean and skies,
And, lifting a fold of the smooth-flowing Thames,
Draws under the world with its turmoils and potholes.
While the swans float on softly, untouched in their realms
By humanity's hum at the root of the springs.

And with reachings of Thought we reach down to the deeps

Of the souls of our brothers,

We teach them full words with our slow-moving lips.

'God,' 'Liberty,' 'Truth,'—which they hearken and think

And work into harmony, link upon link,
Till the silver meets round the earth gelid and dense,
Shedding sparks of electric responding intense

On the dark of eclipse.

Then we hear through the silence and glory afar,
As from shores of a star

In aphelion, the new generations that cry
Disenthralled by our voice to harmonious reply,

'God,' 'Liberty,' 'Truth!'

We are glorious forsooth,

And our name has a seat,

Though the shroud should be donned.

O Life, O Beyond,

Thou art strange, thou art sweet!

VIII.

Help me, God! help me, man! I am low, I am weak,
Death loosens my sinews and creeps in my veins;
My body is cleft by these wedges of pains

From my spirit's serene,

And I feel the externe and insensate creep in

On my organized clay;

I sob not, nor shriek,

Yet I faint fast away:

I am strong in the spirit,—deep-thoughted, clear-eyed,—

I could walk, step for step, with an angel beside,

On the heaven-heights of truth.

Oh, the soul keeps its youth

But the body faints sore, it is tried in the race,

It sinks from the chariot ere reaching the goal,

It is weak, it is cold,

The rein drops from its hold,

It sinks back, with the death in its face.

On, chariot! on, soul!

Ye are all the more fleet—

Be alone at the goal

Of the strange and the sweet!

IX.

Love us, God! love us, man! we believe, we achieve

Let us love, let us live,

For the acts correspond;

We are glorious, and DIE:

And again on the knee of a mild Mystery

That smiles with a change,

Here we lie.

O DEATH, O BEYOND,

Thou art sweet, thou art strange!

A LAY OF THE EARLY ROSE.

—— ‘discordance that can accord.’

ROMAUNT OF THE ROSE

A ROSE once grew within
A garden April-green,
In her liveness, in her liveness,
And the fairer for that oneness.

A white rose delicate
On a tall bough and straight :
Early comer, early comer,
Never waiting for the summer.

Her pretty gestes did win
South winds to let her in,
In her liveness, in her liveness,
All the fairer for that oneness.

‘For if I wait,’ said she,
‘Till time for roses be,
For the moss-rose and the musk-rose,
Maiden-blush and royal-dusk rose,

‘What glory then for me
In such a company?—
Roses plenty, roses plenty,
And one nightingale for twenty!

‘Nay, let me in,’ said she
‘Before the rest are free,
In my liveness, in my liveness,
All the fairer for that oneness.

‘For I would lonely stand
Uplifting my white hand,
On a mission, on a mission,
To declare the coming vision.

‘Upon which lifted sign,
What worship will be mine!
What addressing, what caressing,
And what thanks and praise and blessing!

‘A windlike joy will rush
Through every tree and bush,
Bending softly in affection
And spontaneous benediction.

‘Insects, that only may
Live in a sunbright ray,
To my whiteness, to my whiteness,
Shall be drawn as to a brightness,—

‘ And every moth and bee,
Approach me reverently,
Wheeling o’er me, wheeling o’er me,
Coronals of motioned glory.

‘ Three larks shall leave a cloud,
To my whiter beauty vowed,
Singing gladly all the moontide,
Never waiting for the suntide.

‘ Ten nightingales shall flee
Their woods for love of me,
Singing sadly all the suntide,
Never waiting for the moontide.

‘ I ween the very skies
Will look down with surprise,
When below on earth they see me
With my starry aspect dreamy.

‘ And earth will call her flowers
To hasten out of doors,
By their curtsies and sweet-smelling,
To give grace to my foretelling.’

So praying, did she win
South winds to let her in,
In her liveness, in her liveness,
And the fairer for that oneness.

But ah,—alas for her!
No thing did minister
To her praises, to her praises,
More than might unto a daisy's.

No tree nor bush was seen
To boast a perfect green,
Scarcely having, scarcely having
One leaf broad enough for waving.

The little flies did crawl
Along the southern wall,
Faintly shifting, faintly shifting
Wings scarce long enough for lifting.

The lark, too high or low,
I ween, did miss her so,
With his nest down in the gorses,
And his song in the star-courses.

The nightingale did please
To loiter beyond seas:
Guess him in the Happy islands,
Learning music from the silence!

Only the bee, forsooth,
Came in the place of both,
Doing honour, doing honour
To the honey-dews upon her.

The skies looked coldly down
As on a royal crown ;
Then with drop for drop, at leisure,
They began to rain for pleasure.

Whereat the earth did seem
To waken from a dream,
Winter-frozen, winter-frozen,
Her unquiet eyes unclosing—

Said to the Rose, ‘ Ha, snow !
And art thou fallen so ?
Thou, who wast enthroned stately
All along my mountains lately ?

‘ Holla, thou world-wide snow !
And art thou wasted so,
With a little bough to catch thee,
And a little bee to watch thee ?

—Poor Rose, to be misknown !
Would she had ne’er been blown,
In her liveness, in her liveness,
All the sadder for that oneness !

Some word she tried to say,
Some no . . . ah, wellaway !
But the passion did o’ercome her,
And the fair frail leaves dropped from her.

—Dropped from her, fair and mute,
Close to a poet's foot,
Who beheld them, smiling slowly,
As at something sad yet holy,—

Said, ' Verily and thus
' It chances too with us
Poets, singing sweetest snatches
While that deaf men keep the watches :

' Vaunting to come before
Our own age evermore,
In a liveness, in a liveness,
And the nobler for that oneness.

' Holy in voice and heart,
To high ends, set apart :
All unmated, all unmated,
Just because so consecrated.

' But if alone we be,
Where is our empery ?
And if none can reach our stature,
Who can mete our lofty nature ?

' What bell will yield a tone,
Swung in the air alone ?
If no brazen clapper bringing,
Who can hear the chimed ringing ?

‘What angel but would seem
To sensual eyes, ghost-dim?
And without assimilation,
Vain is inter-penetration.

‘And thus, what can we do,
Poor rose and poet too,
Who both antedate our mission
In an unprepared season?

‘Drop, leaf! be silent, song!
Cold things we come among:
We must warm them, we must warm them,
Ere we ever hope to charm them.

‘Howbeit’ (here his face
Lightened around the place,
So to mark the outward turning
Of its spirit’s inward burning)

‘Something it is, to hold
In God’s worlds manifold,
First revealed to creature-duty,
Some new form of His mild Beauty.

‘Whether that form respect
The sense or intellect,
Holy be, in mood’ or meadow,
The Chief Beauty’s sign and shadow!

‘Holy, in me and thee,
Rose fallen from the tree,—
Though the world stand dumb around us,
All unable to expound us.

‘Though none us deign to bless,
Blessēd are we, natheless;
Blessēd still and consecrated
In that, rose, we were created.

‘Oh, shame to poet’s lays Sung for the dole of praise,—
Hoarsely sung upon the highway
With that obolum da mihi!

‘Shame, shame to poet’s soul
Pining for such a dole,
When Heaven-chosen to inherit
The high throne of a chief spirit!

‘Sit still upon your thrones,
O ye poetic ones!
And if, sooth, the world decry you,
Let it pass unchallenged by you.

‘Ye to yourselves suffice,
Without its flatteries.
Self-contentedly approve you
Unto Him who sits above you,—

‘In prayers, that upward mount
Like to a fair-sunned fount
Which, in gushing back upon you,
Hath an upper music won you,—

‘In faith, that still perceives
No rose can shed her leaves,
Far less, poet fall from mission,
With an unfulfilled fruition,—

‘In hope, that apprehends
An end beyond these ends,
And great uses rendered duly
By the meanest song sung truly,—

‘In thanks, for all the good
By poets understood,
For the sound of seraphs moving
Down the hidden depths of loving,—

‘For sights of things away
Through fissures of the clay,
Promised things which shall be given
And sung over, up in Heaven,—

‘For life, so lovely-vain,
For death, which breaks the chain,
For this sense of present sweetness,
And this yearning to completeness!’

THE POET AND THE BIRD.

A FABLE.

I.

SAID a people to a poet—‘Go out from among us straightway !

While we are thinking earthly things, thou singest of divine :

There’s a little fair brown nightingale who, sitting in the gateway,

Makes fitter music to our ear than any song of thine !’

II.

The poet went out weeping ; the nightingale ceased chanting :

‘Now, wherefore, O thou nightingale, is all thy sweetness done ?’

—‘I cannot sing my earthly things, the heavenly poet wanting,

Whose highest harmony includes the lowest under sun.’

III.

The poet went out weeping, and died abroad, bereft
there ;

The bird flew to his grave and died amid a thousand wails :

And when I last came by the place, I swear the music left there

Was only of the poet's song, and not the nightingale's.

THE CRY OF THE HUMAN.

I.

‘THERE is no God,’ the foolish saith,
But none, ‘There is no sorrow,’
And nature oft the cry of faith,
In bitter need will borrow :
Eyes, which the preacher could not school,
By wayside graves are raisèd,
And lips say, ‘God be pitiful,’
Who ne’er said, ‘God be praisèd.’
Be pitiful, O God !

II.

The tempest stretches from the steep
The shadow of its coming,
The beasts grow tame and near us creep,
As help were in the human ;
Yet, while the cloud-wheels roll and grind,
We spirits tremble under—
The hills have echoes, but we find
No answer for the thunder.
Be pitiful, O God !

III.

The battle hurtles on the plains,
Earth feels new scythes upon her;
We reap our brothers for the wains,
And call the harvest—honour:
Draw face to face, front line to line,
One image all inherit,—
Then kill, curse on, by that same sign,
Clay—clay, and spirit—spirit.
Be pitiful, O God!

IV.

The plague runs festering through the town,
And never a bell is tolling,
And corpses, jostled 'neath the moon,
Nod to the dead-cart's rolling:
The young child calleth for the cup,
The strong man brings it weeping,
The mother from her babe looks up,
And shrieks away its sleeping.
Be pitiful, O God!

V.

The plague of gold strikes far and near,
And deep and strong it enters;
This purple chimar which we wear,
Makes madder than the centaur's:
Our thoughts grow blank, our words grow strange,

We cheer the pale gold-diggers,
Each soul is worth so much on 'Change,
And marked, like sheep, with figures.
Be pitiful, O God!

VI.

The curse of gold upon the land
The lack of bread enforces ;
The rail-cars snort from strand to strand,
Like more of Death's White horses :
The rich preach ' rights ' and ' future days. '
And hear no angel scoffing,
The poor die mute, with starving gaze
On corn-ships in the offing.
Be pitiful, O God!

VII.

We meet together at the feast,
To private mirth betake us ;
We stare down in the winecup, lest
Some vacant chair should shake us :
We name delight, and pledge it round—
' It shall be ours to-morrow ! '
God's seraphs, do your voices sound
As sad, in naming sorrow ?
Be pitiful, O God!

VIII.

We sit together, with the skies,
The steadfast skies, above us,

We look into each other's eyes,
 'And how long will you love us?'
 The eyes grow dim with prophecy,
 The voices, low and breathless,—
 'Till death us part!'—O words, to be
 Our best, for love the deathless!
 Be pitiful, O God!

IX.

We tremble by the harmless bed
 Of one loved and departed :
 Our tears drop on the lips that said
 Last night, 'Be stronger-hearted!'
 O God,—to clasp those fingers close,
 And yet to feel so lonely!
 To see a light upon such brows,
 Which is the daylight only!
 Be pitiful, O God!

X.

The happy children come to us,
 And look up in our faces;
 They ask us—'Was it thus, and thus,
 When we were in their places?'—
 We cannot speak;—we see anew
 The hills we used to live in,
 And feel our mother's smile press through
 The kisses she is giving.
 Be pitiful, O God!

XI.

We pray together at the kirk
For mercy, mercy solely :
Hands weary with the evil work,
We lift them to the Holy.
The corpse is calm below our knee,
Its spirit, bright before Thee—
Between them, worse than either, we—
Without the rest or glory.
Be pitiful, O God !

XII.

We leave the communing of men,
The murmur of the passions,
And live alone, to live again
With endless generations :
Are we so brave ?—The sea and sky
In silence lift their mirrors,
And, glassed therein, our spirits high
Recoil from their own terrors.
Be pitiful, O God !

XIII.

We sit on hills our childhood wist,
Woods, hamlets, streams, beholding :
The sun strikes through the farthest mist
The city's spire to golden :
The city's golden spire it was,
When hope and health were strongest,

But now it is the churchyard grass
We look upon the longest.

Be pitiful, O God!

XIV.

And soon all vision waxeth dull ;
Men whisper, ' He is dying ;'
We cry no more ' Be pitiful !'
We have no strength for crying :
No strength, no need. Then, soul of mine,
Look up and triumph rather—
Lo, in the depth of God's Divine,
The Son adjures the Father,
BE PITIFUL, O GOD !

A PORTRAIT.

‘One name is Elizabeth.’—BEN JONSON.

I WILL paint her as I see her.

Ten times have the lilies blown,
Since she looked upon the sun.

And her face is lily-clear,
Lily-shaped, and dropped in duty
To the law of its own beauty.

Oval cheeks encoloured faintly,
Which a trail of golden hair
Keeps from fading off to air :

And a forehead fair and saintly,
Which two blue eyes undershine,
Like meek prayers before a shrine.

Face and figure of a child,—
Though too calm, you think, and tender,
For the childhood you would lend her.

Yet child-simple, undefiled,
Frank, obedient, waiting still
On the turnings of your will.

Moving light, as all young things,
As young birds, or early wheat
When the wind blows over it.

Only, free from flutterings
Of loud mirth that scorneth measure—
Taking love for her chief pleasure.

Choosing pleasures, for the rest,
Which come softly—just as she,
When she nestles at your knee.

Quiet talk she liketh best,
In a bower of gentle looks,—
Watering flowers, or reading books.

And her voice, it murmurs lowly,
As a silver stream may run,
Which yet feels, you feel, the sun.

And her smile it seems half holy,
As if drawn from thoughts more far
Than our common jestings are.

And if any poet knew her,
He would sing of her with falls
Used in lovely madrigals.

And if any painter drew her,
He would paint her unaware
With a halo round the hair.

And if reader read the poem,
He would whisper—‘ You have done a Consecrated little Una.’

And a dreamer (did you show him
That same picture) would exclaim,
‘ ’Tis my angel, with a name !’

And a stranger, when he sees her
In the street even, smileth stilly,
Just as you would at a lily.

And all voices that address her,
Softens, sleeken every word,
As if speaking to a bird.

And all fancies yearn to cover
The hard earth whereon she passes,
With the thymy-scented grasses.

And all hearts do pray, ‘ God love her !’
Ay and always, in good sooth,
We may all be sure HE DOTTH.

CONFESSIONS.

I.

FACE to face in my chamber, my silent chamber, I saw
her :

God and she and I only, there I sate down to draw
her

Soul through the clefts of confession,—‘Speak, I am holding thee fast,

As the angel of resurrection shall do it at the last!’

‘My cup is blood-red

With my sin,’ she said,

‘And I pour it out to the bitter lees,

As if the angels of judgment stood over me strong at the last,

Or as thou wert as these.’

II.

When God smote his hands together, and struck out thy soul as a spark

Into the organized glory of things, from deeps of the dark,—

Say, didst thou shine, didst thou burn, didst thou honour the power in the form,
As the star does at night, or the fire-fly, or even the little ground-worm?

‘I have sinned,’ she said,

‘For my seed-light shed

Has smouldered away from His first decrees.

The cypress praiseth the fire-fly, the ground-leaf
praiseth the worm;

I am viler than these.’

III.

When God on that sin had pity, and did not trample thee straight

With His wild rains beating and drenching thy light found inadequate;

When He only sent thee the north-wind, a little searching and chill,

To quicken thy flame—didst thou kindle and flash to the heights of His will?

‘I have sinned,’ she said,

‘Unquickened, unspread

My fire dropt down, and I wept on my knees:

I only said of His winds of the north as I shrank from their chill,

What delight is in these?’

IV.

When God on that sin had pity, and did not meet it
as such,

VI.

Again with a lifted voice, like a choral trumpet that takes
 The lowest note of a viol that trembles, and triumphing breaks
 On the air with it solemn and clear,—‘Behold! I have sinned not in this!
 Where I loved, I have loved much and well,—I have verily loved not amiss.
 Let the living,’ she said,
 ‘Inquire of the dead,
 In the house of the pale-fronted images :
 My own true dead will answer for me, that I have not loved amiss
 In my love for all these.

VII.

‘The least touch of their hands in the morning, I keep it by day and by night;
 Their least step on the stair, at the door, still throbs through me, if ever so light;
 Their least gift, which they left to my childhood, far off in the long-ago years,
 Is now turned from a toy to a relic, and seen through the crystals of tears.
 Dig the snow,’ she said,
 ‘For my churchyard bed,
 Yet I, as I sleep, shall not fear to freeze,

But tempered the wind to thy uses, and softened the world to thy touch,
At least thou wast moved in thy soul, though unable to prove it afar,
Thou couldst carry thy light like a jewel, not giving it out like a star?

‘I have sinned,’ she said,

‘And not merited

The gift He gives, by the grace He sees!
The mine-cave praiseth the jewel, the hill-side praiseth
the star;
I am viler than these.’

v.

Then I cried aloud in my passion,—Unthankful and impotent creature,
To throw up thy scorn unto God through the rents in thy beggarly nature!
If He, the all-giving and loving, is served so unduly,
what then
Hast thou done to the weak and the false and the changing,—thy fellows of men?

‘I have loved,’ she said,

(Words bowing her head

As the wind the wet acacia-trees)

‘I saw God sitting above me, but I . . . I sate among men,

And I have loved these.’

If one only of these my beloveds, shall love me with heart-warm tears,
As I have loved these !

VIII.

‘ If I angered any among them, from thenceforth my own life was sore ;
If I fell by chance from their presence, I clung to their memory more :
Their tender I often felt holy, their bitter I sometimes called sweet ;
And whenever their heart has refused me, I fell down straight at their feet.

I have loved,’ she said,—

‘ Man is weak, God is dread,

Yet the weak man dies with his spirit at ease,
Having poured such an unguent of love but once on the Saviour’s feet,
As I lavished for these.’

IX.

Go, I cried, thou hast chosen the Human, and left the Divine !

Then, at least, have the Human shared with thee their wild berry-wine ?

Have they loved back thy love, and when strangers approached thee with blame,

Have they covered thy fault with their kisses, and loved thee the same ?

But she shrunk and said,
 ' God, over my head,
 Must sweep in the wrath of his judgment-seas,
 If He shall deal with me sinning, but only indeed the same
 And no gentler than these.'

LOVED ONCE.

I.

I CLASSED, appraising once,
Earth's lamentable sounds,—the welladay,
The jarring yea and nay,
The fall of kisses on unanswering clay,
The sobbed farewell, the welcome mournfuller,—
But all did leaven the air
With a less bitter leaven of sure despair
Than these words—'I loved ONCE.'

II.

And who saith, 'I loved ONCE' ?
Not angels,—whose clear eyes, love, love foresee,
Love, through eternity,
And by To Love do apprehend To Be.
Not God, called LOVE, His noble crown-name casting
A light too broad for blasting :
The great God changing not from everlasting,
Saith never, 'I loved ONCE.'

III.

Oh, never is 'Loved ONCE'
 Thy word, thou Victim-Christ, misprizëd friend!
 Thy cross and curse may rend,
 But having loved Thou lovest to the end.
 This is man's saying—man's: too weak to move
 One spherëd star above,
 Man desecrates the eternal God-word Love
 By his No More, and Once.

IV.

How say ye, 'We loved once,'
 Blasphemers? Is your earth not cold enow,
 Mourners, without that snow?
 Ah, friends, and would ye wrong each other so?
 And could ye say of some whose love is known.
 Whose prayers have met your own,
 Whose tears have fallen for you, whose smiles have shone
 So long,—'We loved them ONCE'?

V.

Could ye, 'We loved her once,'
 Say calm of me, sweet friends, when out of sight?
 When hearts of better right
 Stand in between me and your happy light?
 Or when, as flowers kept too long in the shade,
 Ye find my colours fade,
 And all that is not love in me, decayed?
 Such words—Ye loved me ONCE!

VI.

Could ye, 'We loved her once'
 Say cold of me when further put away
 In earth's sepulchral clay,
 When mute the lips which deprecate to-day?
 Not so! not then—least then! When life is shriven
 And death's full joy is given,—
 Of those who sit and love you up in heaven,
 Say not, 'We loved them once.'

VII.

Say never, ye loved ONCE:
 God is too near above, the grave, beneath,
 And all our moments breathe
 Too quick in mysteries of life and death,
 For such a word. The eternities avenge
 Affections light of range.
 There comes no change to justify that change,
 Whatever comes—Loved ONCE!

VIII.

And yet that same word ONCE
 Is humanly acceptive. Kings have said
 Shaking a discrowned head,
 'We ruled once,'—dotards, 'We once taught and led,
 Cripples once danced i' the vines, and bards approved
 Were once by scornings moved:
 But love strikes one hour—LOVE! those never loved
 Who dream that they loved ONCE.

THE HOUSE OF CLOUDS.

I.

I WOULD build a cloudy House
For my thoughts to live in,
When for earth too fancy-loose,
And too low for heaven :
Hush ! I talk my dream aloud,
I build it bright to see,—
I build it on the moonlit cloud
To which I looked with thee.

II.

Cloud-walls of the morning's grey,
Faced with amber column,
Crowned with crimson cupola
From a sunset solemn :
May-mists, for the casements, fetch,
Pale and glimmering,
With a sunbeam hid in each
And a smell of spring.

III.

Build the entrance high and proud,
Darkening and then brightening,
Of a riven thunder-cloud,
Veined by the lightning:
Use one with an iris-stain
For the door so thin,
Turning to a sound like rain
As I enter in.

IV.

Build a spacious hall thereby
Boldly, never fearing;
Use the blue place of the sky
Which the wind is clearing:
Branched with corridors sublime,
Flecked with winding stairs,
Such as children wish to climb
Following their own prayers.

V.

In the mutest of the house,
I will have my chamber;
Silence at the door shall use
Evening's light of amber,
Solemnizing every mood,
Softening in degree,
Turning sadness into good
As I turn the key.

VI.

Be my chamber tapestried
With the showers of summer,
Close, but soundless, glorified
When the sunbeams come here—
Wandering harpers, harping on Waters stringed for such,
Drawing colour, for a tune,
With a vibrant touch.

Bring a shadow green and still
From the chestnut-forest,
Bring a purple from the hill,
When the heat is sorest ;
Spread them out from wall to wall,
Carpet-wove around,
Whereupon the foot shall fall
In light instead of sound.

VIII

Bring fantastic cloudlets home
From the noontide zenith,
Ranged for sculptures round the room,
Named as Fancy weeneth ;
Some be Junos, without eyes,
Naiads, without sources,
Some be birds of paradise,
Some, Olympian horses.

IX.

Bring the dews the birds shake off
Waking in the hedges,—
Those too, perfumed for a proof,
From the lilies' edges :
From our England's field and moor,
Bring them calm and white in,
Whence to form a mirror pure
For Love's self-delighting.

X.

Bring a grey cloud from the east
Where the lark is singing,
(Something of the song at least Unlost in the bringing) :
That shall be a morning-chair,
Poet-dream may sit in
When it leans out on the air,
Unrhymed and unwritten.

XI.

Bring the red cloud from the sun,
While he sinketh catch it ;
That shall be a couch,—with one
Sidelong star to watch it,—
Fit for poet's finest thought
At the curfew-sounding ;
Things unseen being nearer brought
Than the seen, around him.

XII.

Poet's thought,—not poet's sigh.
'Las, they come together !
Cloudy walls divide and fly
As in April weather.
Cupola and column proud,
Structure bright to see,
Gone ! except that moonlit cloud
To which I looked with thee.

XIII.

Let them ! Wipe such visionings
From the fancy's cartel :
Love secures some fairer things,
Dowered with his immortal.
The sun may darken, heaven be bowed,
But still unchanged shall be,—
Here, in my soul,—that moonlit cloud
To which I looked with THEE !

A SABBATH MORNING AT SEA.

I.

THE ship went on with solemn face ;
To meet the darkness on the deep,
The solemn ship went onward :
I bowed down weary in the place,
For parting tears and present sleep
Had weighed mine eyelids downward.

II.

Thick sleep which shut all dreams from me,
And kept my inner self apart
And quiet from emotion,
Then brake away and left me free,
Made conscious of a human heart
Betwixt the heaven and ocean.

III.

The new sight, the new wondrous sight !
The waters round me, turbulent,
The skies impassive o'er me,
Calm in a moonless, sunless light,
Half glorified by that intent
Of holding the day-glory !

IV.

Two pale thin clouds did stand upon
The meeting line of sea and sky,
With aspect still and mystic :
I think they did foresee the sun,
And rested on their prophecy
In quietude majestic,

V.

Then flushed to radiance where they stood,
Like statues by the open tomb
Of shining saints half risen.
The sun !—he came up to be viewed,
And sky and sea made mighty room
To inaugurate the vision.

VI.

I oft had seen the dawnlight run
As red wine through the hills, and break
Through many a mist's inurning ;
But, here, no earth profaned the sun :
Heaven, ocean, did alone partake
The sacrament of morning.

VII.

Away with thoughts fantastical !
I would be humble to my worth,
Self-guarded as self-doubted :
Though here no earthly shadows fall,
I, joying, grieving without earth,
May desecrate without it.

VIII.

God's sabbath morning sweeps the waves ;
I would not praise the pageant high
Yet miss the dedicature :
I, carried toward the sunless graves
By force of natural things,—should I
Exult in only nature ?

IX.

And could I bear to sit alone
'Mid nature's fixed benignities,
While my warm pulse was moving ?
Too dark thou art, O glittering sun,
Too strait ye are, capacious seas,
To satisfy the loving !

X.

It seems a better lot than so,
To sit with friends beneath the beech,
And feel them dear and dearer ;
Or follow children as they go
In pretty pairs, with softened speech,
As the church-bells ring nearer.

XI.

Love me, sweet friends, this sabbath day !
The sea sings round me while ye roll
Afar the hymn unaltered,
And kneel, where once I knelt to pray,
And bless me deeper in the soul,
Because the voice has faltered.

XII.

And though this sabbath comes to me
Without the stol'd minister
Or chanting congregation,
God's Spirit brings communion, HE
Who brooded soft on waters drear,
Creator on creation.

XIII.

Himself, I think, shall draw me higher,
Where keep the saints with harp and song
An endless sabbath morning,
And on that sea commixed with fire
Oft drop their eyelids, raised too long
To the full Godhead's burning.

A FLOWER IN A LETTER.

I.

MY lonely chamber next the sea,
Is full of many flowers set free
By summer's earliest duty :
Dear friends upon the garden-walk
Might stop amid their fondest talk
To pull the least in beauty.

II.

A thousand flowers, each seeming one
That learnt by gazing on the sun
To counterfeit his shining ;
Within whose leaves the holy dew
That falls from heaven has won anew
A glory, in declining.

III.

Red roses, used to praises long,
Contented with the poet's song,
The nightingale's being over ;
And lilies white, prepared to touch
The whitest thought, nor soil it much,
Of dreamer turned to lover.

IV.

Deep violets, you liken to
The kindest eyes that look on you,
Without a thought disloyal;
And cactuses, a queen might don
If weary of a golden crown,
And still appear as royal.

V.

Pansies for ladies all,—I wis
That none who wear such brooches, miss
A jewel in the mirror;
And tulips, children love to stretch
Their fingers down, to feel in each
Its beauty's secret nearer.

VI.

Love's language may be talked with these;
To work out choicest sentences,
No blossoms can be meeter;
And, such being used in Eastern bowers,
Young maids may wonder if the flowers
Or meanings be the sweeter.

VII.

And such being strewn before a bride,
Her little foot may turn aside,
Their longer bloom decreeing,
Unless some voice's whispered sound
Should make her gaze upon the ground
Too earnestly for seeing.

VIII.

And such being scattered on a grave,
 Whoever mourneth there may have
 A type which seemeth worthy
 Of that fair body hid below,
 Which bloomed on earth a time ago
 Then perished as the earthy.

IX.

And such being wreathed for worldly feast,
 Across the brimming cup some guest
 Their rainbow colours viewing
 May feel them, with a silent start,
 The covenant, his childish heart
 With nature made, renewing.

X.

No flowers our gardened England hath
 To match with these, in bloom and breath,
 Which from the world are hiding
 In sunny Devon moist with rills,—
 A nunnery of cloistered hills,
 The elements presiding.

XI.

By Loddon's stream the flowers are fair
 That meet one gifted lady's care
 With prodigal rewarding,
 (For Beauty is too used to run
 To Mitford's bower—to want the sun
 To light her through the garden).

XII.

But here, all summers are comprised,
The nightly frosts shrink exorcised
Before the priestly moonshine;
And every wind with stol'd feet,
In wandering down the alleys sweet,
Steps lightly on the sunshine,

XIII.

And (having promised Harpocrate
Among the nodding roses that
No harm shall touch his daughters)
Gives quite away the rushing sound
He dares not use upon such ground,
To ever-trickling waters.

XIV.

Yet, sun and wind! what can ye do
But make the leaves more brightly show
In posies newly gathered?
I look away from all your best,
To one poor flower unlike the rest,
A little flower half-withered.

XV.

I do not think it ever was
A pretty flower,—to make the grass
Look greener where it reddened;
And now it seems ashamed to be
Alone, in all this company,
Of aspect shrunk and saddened.

XVI.

A chamber-window was the spot
It grew in, from a garden-pot,
Among the city shadows :
If any, tending it, might seem
To smile, 'twas only in a dream
Of nature in the meadows.

XVII.

How coldly on its head did fall
The sunshine, from the city wall
In pale refraction driven !
How sadly plashed upon its leaves
The raindrops, losing in the eaves
The first sweet news of heaven !

XVIII.

And those who planted, gathered it
In gamesome or in loving fit,
And sent it as a token
Of what their city pleasures be,—
For one, in Devon by the sea
And garden-blooms, to look on.

XIX.

But SHE for whom the jest was meant,
With a grave passion innocent
Receiving what was given,—
Oh, if her face she turn'd then,
Let none say 'twas to gaze again
Upon the flowers of Devon !

xx.

Because, whatever virtue dwells
In genial skies, warm oracles

For gardens brightly springing,—
The flower which grew beneath your eyes,
Belovèd friends, to mine supplies
A beauty worthier singing!

THE MASK.

I.

I HAVE a smiling face, she said,
I have a jest for all I meet,
I have a garland for my head
And all its flowers are sweet,—
And so you call me gay, she said.

II.

Grief taught to me this smile, she said,
And Wrong did teach this jesting bold;
These flowers were plucked from garden-bed
While a death-chime was tolled:
And what now will you say?—she said.

III.

Behind no prison-grate, she said,
Which slurs the sunshine half a mile,
Live captives so uncomforted
As souls behind a smile.
God's pity let us pray, she said.

IV.

I know my face is bright, she said,—
Such brightness dying suns diffuse :
I bear upon my forehead shed
The sign of what I lose,
The ending of my day, she said.

V.

If I dared leave this smile, she said,
And take a moan upon my mouth,
And tie a cypress round my head,
And let my tears run smooth,
It were the happier way, she said.

VI.

And since that must not be, she said,
I fain your bitter world would leave.
How calmly, calmly, smile the Dead,
Who do not, therefore grieve !
The yea of Heaven is yea, she said.

VII.

But in your bitter world, she said,
Face-joy 's a costly mask to wear ;
'Tis bought with pangs long nourish'd.
And rounded to despair :
Grief's earnest makes life's play, she said.

VIII.

Ye weep for those who weep ? she said—
Ah fools ! I bid you pass them by.
Go, weep for those whose hearts have bled
What time their eyes were dry.
Whom sadder can I say ? she said.

CALLS ON THE HEART.

I.

FREE Heart, that singest to-day
Like a bird on the first green spray,
Wilt thou go forth to the world
Where the hawk hath his wing unfurled
To follow, perhaps, thy way?
Where the tamer thine own will bind,
And, to make thee sing, will blind,
While the little hip grows for the free behind?
Heart, wilt thou go?
—‘No, no!’
‘Free hearts are better so.’

II.

The world, thou hast heard it told,
Has counted its robber-gold,
And the pieces stick to the hand;
The world goes riding it fair and grand,
While the truth is bought and sold;

World-voices east, world-voices west,
 They call thee, Heart, from thine early rest,
 'Come hither, come hither and be our guest.'

Heart, wilt thou go?

—'No, no!

'Good hearts are calmer so.'

III.

Who calleth thee, Heart? World's Strife,
 With a golden heft to his knife;
 World's Mirth, with a finger fine
 That draws on a board in wine
 Her blood-red plans of life;
 World's Gain, with a brow knit down;
 World's Fame, with a laurel crown
 Which rustles most as the leaves turn brown:
 Heart, wilt thou go?

—'No, no!

'Calm hearts are wiser so.'

IV.

Hast heard that Proserpina
 (Once fooling) was snatched away
 To partake the dark king's seat,
 And the tears ran fast on her feet
 To think how the sun shone yesterday?
 With her ankles sunken in asphodel
 She wept for the roses of earth which fell

From her lap when the wild car drave to hell.

Heart, wilt thou go ?

—‘ No, no !

‘ Wise hearts are warmer so.’

v.

And what is this place not seen,
Where Hearts may hide serene ?

‘ ’Tis a fair still house well-kept,

‘ Which humble thoughts have swept,

‘ And holy prayers made clean.

‘ There, I sit with Love in the sun,

‘ And we two never have done

‘ Singing sweeter songs than are guessed by one.’

Heart, wilt thou go ?

—‘ No, no !

‘ Warm hearts are fuller so.’

vi.

O Heart, O Love,—I fear

That Love may be kept too near.

Hast heard, O Heart, that tale,

How Love may be false and frail

To a Heart once holden dear ?

—‘ But this true Love of mine

‘ Clings fast as the clinging vine,

‘ And mingles pure as the grapes in wine.’

Heart, wilt thou go ?

—‘ No, no !

‘ Full hearts beat higher so.’

VII.

O Heart, O Love, beware !
 Look up, and boast not there,
 For who has twirled at the pin ?
 'Tis the World, between Death and Sin,—
 The World and the world's Despair !
 And Death has quickened his pace
 To the hearth, with a mocking face,
 Familiar as Love, in Love's own place.
 Heart, wilt thou go ?
 —' Still, no !
 ' High hearts must grieve even so.'

VIII.

The house is waste to-day,—
 The leaf has dropt from the spray,
 The thorn, prickt through to the song :
 If summer doeth no wrong
 The winter will, they say,
 Sing, Heart ! what heart replies ?
 In vain we were calm and wise,
 If the tears unkissed stand on in our eyes.
 Heart, wilt thou go ?
 —' Ah, no !
 ' Grieved hearts must break even so.'

IX.

Howbeit all is not lost.
 The warm noon ends in frost,

And worldly tongues of promise,
Like sheep-bells die off from us
On the desert hills cloud-crossed :
Yet through the silence shall
Pierce the death-angel's call,
And ' Come up hither,' recover all
Heart, wilt thou go ?
— ' I go !
' Broken hearts triumph so.'

WISDOM UNAPPLIED.

I.

IF I were thou, O butterfly,
And poised my purple wing to spy
The sweetest flowers that live and die,

II.

I would not waste my strength on those,
As thou,—for summer has a close,
And pansies bloom not in the snows.

III.

If I were thou, O working bee,
And all that honey-gold I see,
Could delve from roses easily,

IV.

I would not hive it at man's door,
As thou,—that heirdom of my store
Should make him rich and leave me poor.

V.

If I were thou, O eagle proud,
And screamed the thunder back aloud,
And faced the lightning from the cloud,

VI.

I would not build my eyrie-throne,
As thou,—upon a crumbling stone
Which the next storm may trample down.

VII.

If I were thou, O gallant steed,
With pawing hoof and dancing head,
And eye outrunning thine own speed,

VIII.

I would not meeken to the rein,
As thou,—nor smooth my nostril plain
From the glad desert's snort and strain.

IX.

If I were thou, red-breasted bird,
With song at shut-up window heard,
Like Love's sweet yes too long deferred,

X.

I would not overstay delight,
As thou,—but take a swallow-flight
Till the new spring returned to sight.

XI.

While yet I spake, a touch was laid
Upon my brow, whose pride did fade
As thus, methought, an angel said,—

XII.

‘If I were thou who sing’st this song,
Most wise for others, and most strong
In seeing right while doing wrong,

XIII.

‘I would not waste my cares, and choose,
As thou,—to seek what thou must lose,
Such gains as perish in the use.

XIV.

‘I would not work where none can win,
As thou,—halfway ’twixt grief and sin,
But look above and judge within.

XV.

‘I would not let my pulse beat high,
As thou,—towards fame’s regality,
Nor yet in love’s great jeopardy.

XVI.

‘I would not champ the hard cold bit,
As thou,—of what the world thinks fit,
But take God’s freedom, using it.

XVII.

‘I would not play earth’s winter out,
As thou,—but gird my soul about,
And live for life past death and doubt.

XVIII.

‘Then sing, O singer!—but allow,
Beast, fly and bird, called foolish now,
Are wise (for all thy scorn) as thou.’

MEMORY AND HOPE.

I.

BACK-LOOKING Memory

And prophet Hope both sprang from out the ground
One, where the flashing of cherubic sword
Fell sad in Eden's ward,
And one, from Eden earth within the sound
Of the four rivers lapsing pleasantly,
What time the promise after curse was said,
'Thy seed shall bruise his head.'

II.

Poor Memory's brain is wild,
As moonstruck by that flaming atmosphere
When she was born ; her deep eyes shine and shone
With light that conquereth sun
And stars to wanner paleness year by year :
With odorous gums she mixeth things defiled,
She trampleth down earth's grasses green and sweet
With her far-wandering feet.

III.

She plucketh many flowers,
Their beauty on her bosom's coldness killing :
She teacheth every melancholy sound
To winds and waters round ;
She droppeth tears with seed where man is tilling
The rugged soil in his exhausted hours ;
She smileth—ah me ! in her smile doth go
A mood of deeper woe.

IV.

Hope tripped on out of sight,
Crowned with an Eden wreath she saw not wither,
And went a-nodding through the wilderness
With brow that shone no less Than a sea-gull's wing, brought nearer by rough weather,
Searching the treeless rock for fruits of light ;
Her fair quick feet being armed from stones and cold
By slippers of pure gold.

V.

Memory did Hope much wrong
And, while she dreamed, her slippers stole away ;
But still she wended on with mirth unheeding,
Although her feet were bleeding,
Till Memory tracked her on a certain day,
And with most evil eyes did search her long
And cruelly, whereat she sank to ground
In a stark deadly swoond.

VI.

And so my Hope were slain,
Had it not been that THOU wast standing near Oh Thou who saidest 'live,' to creatures lying
In their own blood and dying!
For Thou her forehead to Thine heart didst rear
And make its silent pulses sing again,
Pouring a new light o'er her darkened eyne
With tender tears from Thine.

VII.

Therefore my Hope arose
From out her swoond and gazed upon Thy face,
And, meeting there that soft subduing look
Which Peter's spirit shook,
Sank downward in a rapture to embrace
Thy pierc'd hands and feet with kisses close,
And prayed Thee to assist her evermore
To 'reach the things before.'

VIII.

Then gavest Thou the smile
Whence angel-wings thrill quick like summerlightning,
Vouchsafing rest beside Thee, where she never
From Love and Faith may sever:—
Whereat the Eden crown she saw not whitening
A time ago, though whitening all the while,
Reddened with life to hear the Voice which talked
To Adam as he walked.

HUMAN LIFE'S MYSTERY.

I.

WE sow the glebe, we reap the corn,
We build the house where we may rest,
And then, at moments, suddenly
We look up to the great wide sky,
Inquiring wherefore we were born,
For earnest or for jest?

II.

The senses folding thick and dark
About the stifled soul within,
We guess diviner things beyond,
And yearn to them with yearning fond;
We strike out blindly to a mark
Believed in, but not seen.

III.

We vibrate to the pant and thrill
Wherewith Eternity has curled
In serpent-twine about God's seat:
While, freshening upward to His feet,
In gradual growth His full-leaved will Expands from world to world.

IV.

And, in the tumult and excess
 Of act and passion under sun,
 We sometimes hear—oh, soft and far,
 As silver star did touch with star,
 The kiss of Peace and Righteousness
 Through all things that are done.

V.

God keeps His holy mysteries
 Just on the outside of man's dream ;
 In diapason slow, we think
 To hear their pinions rise and sink,
 While they float pure beneath His eyes,
 Like swans adown a stream.

VI.

Abstractions, are they, from the forms
 Of His great beauty ?—~~exaltations~~ exaltations
 From His great glory ?—strong previsions
 Of what we shall be ?—intuitions
 Of what we are—in calms and storms
 Beyond our peace and passions ?

VII.

Things nameless ! which, in passing so,
 Do stroke us with a subtle grace ;
 We say, ' Who passes ? '—they are dumb ;
 We cannot see them go or come,
 Their touches fall soft, cold, as snow
 Upon a blind man's face.

VIII.

Yet, touching so they draw above
Our common thoughts to Heaven's unknown;
Our daily joy and pain advance
To a divine significance,
Our human love—O mortal love,
That light is not its own!

IX.

And sometimes horror chills our blood
To be so near such mystic Things,
And we wrap round us for defence
Our purple manners, moods of sense—
As angels from the face of God
Stand hidden in their wings.

X.

And sometimes through life's heavy swound
We grope for them, with strangled breath
We stretch our hands abroad and try
To reach them in our agony;
And widen, so, the broad life-wound
Soon large enough for death.

A CHILD'S THOUGHT OF GOD.

I.

THEY say that God lives very high ;
But if you look above the pines
You cannot see our God ; and why ?

II.

And if you dig down in the mines
You never see Him in the gold ;
Though from Him all that's glory shines

III.

God is so good, He wears a fold
Of heaven and earth across His face—
Like secrets kept, for love, untold.

IV.

But still I feel that His embrace
Slides down by thrills, through all things made,
Through sight and sound of every place.

V.

As if my tender mother laid
On my shut lips her kisses' pressure,
Half-waking me at night, and said
'Who kissed you through the dark, dear guesser?'

THE CLAIM.

I.

GRIEF sate upon a rock and sighed one day,
(Sighing is all her rest)
‘ Wellaway, wellaway, ah wellaway ! ’
As ocean beat the stone, did she her breast,
‘ Ah wellaway ! ah me ! alas, ah me ! ’
Such sighing uttered she.

II.

A Cloud spake out of heaven, as soft as rain
That falls on water,—‘ Lo,
‘ The winds have wandered from me ! I remain
Alone in the sky-waste, and cannot go
To lean my whiteness on the mountain blue
Till wanted for more dew.

III.

‘ The sun has struck my brain to weary peace,
Whereby constrained and pale
I spin for him a larger golden fleece
Than Jason’s, yearning for as full a sail.
Sweet Grief, when thou hast sighèd to thy mind,
Give me a sigh for wind,

IV.

And let it carry me adown the west.'

But Love, who próstrated
Lay at Grief's foot, his lifted eyes possessed
Of her full image, answered in her stead ;
' Now nay, now nay ! she shall not give away
What is my wealth, for any Cloud that flieth :
Where Grief makes moan,
Love claims his own,
And therefore do I lie here night and day.
And eke my life out with the breath she sigheth.

SONG OF THE ROSE.

ATTRIBUTED TO SAPPHO.

(From Achilles Tatius.)

IF Zeus chose us a King of the flowers in his mirth,
He would call to the rose and would royally crown it;
For the rose, ho, the rose! is the grace of the earth,
Is the light of the plants that are growing upon it:
For the rose, ho, the rose! is the eye of the flowers,
Is the blush of the meadows that feel themselves fair,
Is the lightning of beauty that strikes through the bowers
On pale lovers who sit in the glow unaware.
Ho, the rose breathes of love! ho, the rose lifts the cup
To the red lips of Cypris invoked for a guest!
Ho, the rose, having curled its sweet leaves for the world,
Takes delight in the motion its petals keep up,
As they laugh to the wind as it laughs from the west!

A DEAD ROSE.

I.

O ROSE, who dares to name thee ?
No longer roseate now, nor soft nor sweet,
But pale and hard and dry as stubble wheat,—
Kept seven years in a drawer, thy titles shame thee.

II.

The breeze that used to blow thee
Between the hedgerow thorns, and take away
An odour up the lane to last all day,—
If breathing now, unsweetened would forgo thee.

III.

The sun that used to smite thee,
And mix his glory in thy gorgeous urn
Till beam appeared to bloom, and flower to burn,—
If shining now, with not a hue would light thee.

IV.

The dew that used to wet thee,
And, white first, grow incarnadined because
It lay upon thee where the crimson was,—
If dropping now, would darken where it met thee.

V.

The fly that 'lit upon thee
To stretch the tendrils of its tiny feet
Along thy leaf's pure edges after heat,—
If 'lighting now, would coldly overrun thee.

VI.

The bee that once did suck thee,
And build thy perfumed ambers up his hive,
And swoon in thee for joy, till scarce alive,—
If passing now, would blindly overlook thee.

VII.

The heart doth recognise thee,
Alone, alone! the heart doth smell thee sweet,
Doth view thee fair, doth judge thee most complete,
Perceiving all those changes that disguise thee.

VIII.

Yes, and the heart doth owe thee
More love, dead rose, than to any roses bold
Which Julia wears at dances, smiling cold:—
Lie still upon this heart which breaks below thee!

THE EXILE'S RETURN.

I.

WHEN from thee, weeping I removed,
And from my land for years,
I thought not to return, Beloved,
With those same parting tears.
I come again to hill and lea,
Weeping for thee.

II.

I clasped thine hand when standing last
Upon the shore in sight.
The land is green, the ship is fast,
I shall be there to night.
I shall be there—no longer we—
No more with thee!

III.

Had I beheld thee dead and still,
I might more clearly know
How heart of thine could turn as chill
As hearts by nature so ;
How change could touch the falsehood-free
And changeless thee.

IV.

But, now thy fervid looks last-seen
Within my soul remain,
'Tis hard to think that they have been,
To be no more again—
That I shall vainly wait, ah me!
A word from thee.

V.

I could not bear to look upon
That mound of funeral clay
Where one sweet voice is silence—one
Æthereal brow, decay;
Where all thy mortal I may see,
But never thee.

VI.

For thou art where all friends are gone
Whose parting pain is o'er;
And I, who love and weep alone,
Where thou wilt weep no more,
Weep bitterly and selfishly
For me, not thee.

VII.

I know, Beloved, thou canst not know
That I endure this pain;
For saints in heaven, the Scriptures show,
Can never grieve again:
And grief known mine, even there, would be Still shared by thee.

THE SLEEP.

“He giveth His beloved sleep.”—Psalm cxxvii. 2.

I.

OF all the thoughts of God that are
Borne inward into souls afar,
Along the Psalmist's music deep,
Now tell me if that any is,
For gift or grace, surpassing this—
‘He giveth His beloved, sleep’?

II.

What would we give to our beloved?
The hero's heart to be unmoved,
The poet's star-tuned harp to sweep,
The patriot's voice to teach and rouse,
The monarch's crown to light the brows?—
He giveth His beloved, sleep.

III.

What do we give to our beloved?
A little faith all undisproved,
A little dust to overweep,
And bitter memories to make
The whole earth blasted for our sake:
He giveth His belovèd, sleep.

IV.

'Sleep soft, beloved!' we sometimes say,
Who have no tune to charm away
Sad dreams that through the eyelids creep:
But never doleful dream again
Shall break the happy slumber when
He giveth His belovèd, sleep.

V.

O earth, so full of dreary noises!
O men, with wailing in your voices!
O delvèd gold, the wailers heap!
O strife, O curse, that o'er it fall!
God strikes a silence through you all,
And giveth His belovèd, sleep.

VI.

His dews drop mutely on the hill,
His cloud above it saileth still,
Though on its slope men sow and reap:
More softly than the dew is shed,
Or cloud is floated overhead,
He giveth His belovèd, sleep.

VII.

Ay, men may wonder while they scan
A living, thinking, feeling man
Confirmed in such a rest to keep ;
But angels say, and through the word
I think their happy smile is heard—
'He giveth His belovèd, sleep.'

VIII.

For me, my heart that erst did go
Most like a tired child at a show,
That sees through tears the mummers leap,
Would now its wearied vision close,
Would childlike on His love repose
Who giveth His belovèd, sleep.

IX.

And friends, dear friends, when it shall be
That this low breath is gone from me,
And round my bier ye come to weep,
Let One, most loving of you all,
Say, 'Not a tear must o'er her fall !
'He giveth His belovèd, sleep.'

THE MEASURE.

“ He comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure (שֵׁלִי).”
Isaiah xl.

“ Thou givest them tears to drink in a measure (שֵׁלִי).”
Psalm lxxx.

I.

God the Creator, with a pulseless hand
Of unoriginated power, hath weighed
The dust of earth and tears of man in one
Measure, and by one weight :
So saith His holy book.

II.

Shall we, then, who have issued from the dust
And there return,—shall we, who toil for dust,
And wrap our winnings in this dusty life,
Say, ‘ No more tears, Lord God!
‘ The measure runneth o’er’?

* I believe that the word occurs in no other part of the Hebrew Scriptures.

III.

Oh, Holder of the balance, laughest Thou ?
Nay, Lord ! be gentler to our foolishness,
For His sake who assumed our dust and turns
 On Thee pathetic eyes
 Still moistened with our tears.

IV.

And teach us, O our Father, while we weep,
To look in patience upon earth and learn—
Waiting, in that meek gesture, till at last
 These tearful eyes be filled
 With the dry dust of death.

COWPER'S GRAVE.

I.

It is a place where poets crowned may feel the heart's decaying ;
It is a place where happy saints may weep amid their praying :
Yet let the grief and humbleness as low as silence
languish :
Earth surely now may give her calm to whom she gave her anguish.

II.

O poets, from a maniac's tongue was poured the death-
less singing !
O Christians, at your cross of hope a hopeless hand was clinging !
O men, this man in brotherhood your weary paths
beguiling,
Groaned inly while he taught you peace, and died while ye were smiling !

III.

And now, what time ye all may read through dimming
tears his story,
How discord on the music fell and darkness on the glory,
And how when, one by one, sweet sounds and wandering lights departed,
He wore no less a loving face because so broken-hearted,

IV.

He shall be strong to sanctify the poet's high vocation,
And bow the meekest Christian down in meeker adoration ;
Nor ever shall he be, in praise, by wise or good forsaken,
Named softly as the household name of one whom God hath taken.

V.

With quiet sadness and no gloom I learn to think upon him,
With meekness that is gratefulness to God whose heaven hath won him,
Who suffered once the madness-cloud to His own love
to blind him,
But gently led the blind along where breath and bird could find him ;

VI.

And wrought within his shattered brain such quick poetic senses
As hills have language for, and stars, harmonious influences :
The pulse of dew upon the grass kept his within its number,
And silent shadows from the trees refreshed him like a slumber.

Wild timid hares were drawn from woods to share his home-caresses,
Uplooking to his human eyes with sylvan tendernesses :
The very world, by God's constraint, from falsehood's ways removing,
Its women and its men became, beside him, true and loving.

VIII.

And though, in blindness, he remained unconscious of that guiding,
And things provided came without the sweet sense of providing,
He testified this solemn truth, while phrenzy desolated,
—Nor man nor nature satisfies whom only God created.

IX.

Like a sick child that knoweth not his mother while she blesses
And drops upon his burning brow the coolness of her kisses,—
That turns his fevered eyes around—‘My mother!
where’s my mother?’—
As if such tender words and deeds could come from any other!—

The fever gone, with leaps of heart he sees her bending o’er him,
Her face all pale from watchful love, the unweary love
she bore him!—
Thus woke the poet from the dream his life’s long fever gave him,
Beneath those deep pathetic Eyes which closed in death to save him.

XI.

Thus? oh, not thus! no type of earth can image that awaking,
Wherein he scarcely heard the chant of seraphs, round him breaking,
Or felt the new immortal throb of soul from body parted,
But felt those eyes alone, and knew,—‘My Saviour!
not deserted!’

XII.

Deserted! Who hath dreamt that when the cross in darkness rested,
Upon the Victim's hidden face no love was manifested?
What frantic hands outstretched have e'er the atoning drops averted?
What tears have washed them from the soul, that one should be deserted?

XIII.

Deserted! God could separate from His own essence rather;
And Adam's sins have swept between the righteous
Son and Father:
Yea, once, Immanuel's orphaned cry His universe hath shaken—
It went up single, echoless, 'My God, I am forsaken!'

XIV.

It went up from the Holy's lips amid His lost creation,
That, of the lost, no son should use those words of desolation!
That earth's worst phrenzies, marring hope, should mar not hope's fruition,
And I, on Cowper's grave, should see his rapture in a vision.

THE WEAKEST THING.

I.

WHICH is the weakest thing of all
Mine heart can ponder?
The sun, a little cloud can pall
With darkness yonder?
The cloud, a little wind can move
Where'er it listeth?
The wind, a little leaf above,
Though sere, resisteth?

II.

What time that yellow leaf was green,
My days were gladder;
But now, whatever Spring may mean,
I must grow sadder.
Ah me! a leaf with sighs can wring
My lips asunder?
Then is mine heart the weakest thing
Itself can ponder.

III.

Yet, Heart, when sun and cloud are pined
And drop together,
And at a blast which is not wind,
The forests wither,
Thou, from the darkening deathly curse,
To glory breakest,—
The Strongest of the universe
Guarding the weakest !

THE PET-NAME.

————— the name
Which from THEIR lips seemed a caress.
MISS MITFORD'S Dramatic Scenes.

I.

I HAVE a name, a little name,
Uncadenced for the ear,
Unhonoured by ancestral claim,
Unsanctified by prayer and psalm
The solemn font anear.

II.

It never did to pages wove
For gay romance belong ;
It never dedicate did move
As 'Sacharissa,' unto love,
'Orinda,' unto song.

III.

Though I write books, it will be read
Upon the leaves of none,
And afterward, when I am dead,
Will ne'er be graved for sight or tread,
Across my funeral-stone.

IV.

This name, whoever chance to call,
Perhaps your smile may win :
Nay, do not smile ! mine eyelids fall
Over mine eyes and feel withal
The sudden tears within.

V.

Is there a leaf that greenly grows
Where summer meadows bloom,
But gathereth the winter snows
And changeth to the hue of those,
If lasting till they come ?

VI.

Is there a word, or jest, or game,
But time incrusteth round
With sad associate thoughts the same ?
And so to me my very name
Assumes a mournful sound.

VII.

My brother gave that name to me
When we were children twain,
When names acquired baptismally
Were hard to utter, as to see
That life had any pain.

VIII.

No shade was on us then, save one
Of chestnuts from the hill;
And through the word our laugh did run
As part thereof: the mirth being done,
He calls me by it still.

IX.

Nay, do not smile! I hear in it
What none of you can hear,—
The talk upon the willow seat,
The bird and wind that did repeat
Around, our human cheer.

X.

I hear the birthday's noisy bliss,
My sisters' woodland glee,
My father's praise, I did not miss,
When stooping down he cared to kiss
The poet at his knee,—

XI.

And voices which, to name me, aye
Their tenderest tones were keeping—
To some I never more can say
An answer till God wipes away
In heaven these drops of weeping.

XII.

My name to me a sadness wears :
No murmurs cross my mind—
Now God be thanked for these thick tears
Which show, of those departed years,
Sweet memories left behind.

XIII.

Now God be thanked for years enwrought
With love which softens yet :
Now God be thanked for every thought
Which is so tender it has caught
Earth's guerdon of regret.

XIV.

Earth saddens, never shall remove Affections purely given ;
And e'en that mortal grief shall prove
The immortality of love,
And heighten it with Heaven.

THE MOURNING MOTHER.

(OF THE DEAD BLIND.)

I.

Dost thou weep, mourning mother,
For thy blind boy in grave?
That no more with each other,
Sweet counsel ye can have?
That he, left dark by nature,
Can never more be led
By thee, maternal creature,
Along smooth paths instead?
That thou canst no more show him
The sunshine, by the heat;
The river's silver flowing,
By murmurs at his feet?
The foliage, by its coolness;
The roses, by their smell;
And all creation's fulness,
By Love's invisible?
Weepest thou to behold not
His meek blind eyes again,—
Closed doorways which were folded,
And prayed against in vain—

And under which, sate smiling
The child-mouth evermore,
As one who watcheth, wiling
The time by, at a door?
And weapest thou to feel not
His clinging hand on thine—
Which now, at dream-time, will not
Its cold touch disentwine?
And weapest thou still oft,
Oh, never more to mark
His low soft words, made softer
By speaking in the dark?
Weep on, thou mourning mother!

II.

But since to him when living,
Thou wast both sun and moon,
Look o'er his grave, surviving,
From a high sphere alone:
Sustain that exaltation,
Expand that tender light,
And hold in mother-passion
Thy Blessèd in thy sight.
See how he went out straightway
From the dark world he knew,—
No twilight in the gateway
To mediate 'twixt the two,—
Into the sudden glory,
Out of the dark he trod,

Departing from before thee
At once to light and God!—
For the first face, beholding
The Christ's in its divine,
For the first place, the golden
And tideless hyaline,
With trees at lasting summer
That rock to songful sound,
While angels the new-comer
Wrap a still smile around.
Oh, in the blessed psalm now,
His happy voice he tries,
Spreading a thicker palm-bough,
Than others, o'er his eyes!
Yet still, in all the singing,
Thinks haply of thy song
Which, in his life's first springing,
Sang to him all night long;
And wishes it beside him,
With kissing lips that cool
And soft did overglide him,
To make the sweetness full.
Look up, O mourning mother!
Thy blind boy walks in light :
Ye wait for one another
Before God's infinite.
But thou art now the darkest,
Thou mother left below—
Thou, the sole blind,—thou markest,

Content that it be so,—
Until ye two have meeting
Where Heaven's pearl-gate is,
And he shall lead thy feet in,
As once thou leddest his.
Wait on, thou mourning mother !

A VALEDICTION.

I.

GOD be with thee, my belovëd,—GOD be with thee!
Else alone thou goest forth,
Thy face unto the north,
Moor and pleasance all around thee and beneath thee
Looking equal in one snow;
While I who try to reach thee,
Vainly follow, vainly follow
With the farewell and the hollo,
And cannot reach thee so.
Alas, I can but teach thee!
GOD be with thee, my belovëd,—GOD be with thee!

II.

Can I teach thee, my belovëd,—can I teach thee?
If I said, 'Go left or right,'
The counsel would be light,
The wisdom, poor of all that could enrich thee;
My right would show like left;

My raising would depress thee,
My choice of light would blind thee,
• Of way, would leave behind thee,
Of end, would leave bereft.
Alas, I can but bless thee!

May GOD teach thee, my belovëd,—may GOD teach thee!

III.

Can I bless thee, my belovëd,—can I bless thee?
What blessing word can I
From mine own tears keep dry?
What flowers grow in my field wherewith to dress thee?
My good reverts to ill;
My calmnesses would move thee,
My softnesses would prick thee,
My bindings up would break thee,
My crownings, curse and kill.
Alas, I can but love thee!

May GOD bless thee, my belovëd,—may GOD bless thee!

IV.

Can I love thee, my belovëd,—can I love thee?
And is this like love, to stand
With no help in my hand,
When strong as death I fain would watch above thee?
My love-kiss can deny

No tear that falls beneath it;
Mine oath of love can swear thee
From no ill that comes near thee,
And thou diest while I breathe it,
And I—I can but die!

May God love thee, my beloved,—may God love thee!

LESSONS FROM THE GORSE.

“To win the secret of a weed’s plain heart.”

LOWELL.

I.

MOUNTAIN gorses, ever-golden.
Cankered not the whole year long !
Do ye teach us to be strong,
Howsoever pricked and holden
Like your thorny blooms, and so
Trodden on by rain and snow,
Up the hill-side of this life, as bleak as where ye grow !

II.

Mountain blossoms, shining blossoms,
Do ye teach us to be glad
When no summer can be had,
Blooming in our inward bosoms ?
Ye, whom God preserveth still,
Set as lights upon a hill,
Tokens to the wintry earth that Beauty liveth still !

III.

Mountain gorses, do ye teach us
From that academic chair
Canopied with azure air,
That the wisest word man reaches
Is the humblest he can speak ?
Ye, who live on mountain peak,
Yet live low along the ground, beside the grasses meek !

IV.

Mountain gorses, since Linnæus
Knelt beside you on the sod,
For your beauty thanking God,—
For your teaching, ye should see us
Bowing in prostration new !
Whence arisen,—if one or two Drops be on our cheeks—O world, they are not tears but dew.

THE LADY'S YES.

I.

‘YES,’ I answered you last night ;
‘No,’ this morning, sir, I say :
Colours seen by candle-light
Will not look the same by day.

II.

When the viols played their best,
Lamps above and laughs below,
Love me sounded like a jest,
Fit for yes or fit for no.

III.

Call me false or call me free,
Vow, whatever light may shine,—
No man on your face shall see
Any grief for change on mine.

IV.

Yet the sin is on us both ;
Time to dance is not to woo ;
Wooing light makes fickle troth,
Scorn of me recoils on you.

V.

Learn to win a lady's faith
Nobly, as the thing is high,
Bravely, as for life and death,
With a loyal gravity.

VI.

Lead her from the festive boards,
Point her to the starry skies;
Guard her, by your truthful words
Pure from courtship's flatteries.

VII.

By your truth she shall be true,
Ever true, as wives of yore;
And her yes, once said to you,
SHALL be Yes for evermore.

A WOMAN'S SHORTCOMINGS.

I.

SHE has laughed as softly as if she sighed,
She has counted six, and over,
Of a purse well filled, and a heart well tried—
Oh, each a worthy lover !
They 'give her time ;' for her soul must slip
Where the world has set the grooving :
She will lie to none with her fair red lip—
But love seeks truer loving.

II.

She trembles her fan in a sweetness dumb,
As her thoughts were beyond recalling,
With a glance for one, and a glance for some,
From her eyelids rising and falling ;
Speaks common words with a blushful air,
Hears bold words, unreprieving ;
But her silence says—what she never will swear—
And love seeks better loving.

III.

Go, lady, lean to the night-guitar
And drop a smile to the bringer,
Then smile as sweetly, when he is far,
At the voice of an in-door singer.
Bask tenderly beneath tender eyes;
Glance lightly, on their removing;
And join new vows to old perjuries—
But dare not call it loving.

IV.

Unless you can think, when the song is done,
No other is soft in the rhythm;
Unless you can feel, when left by One,
That all men else go with him;
Unless you can know, when unpraised by his breath,
That your beauty itself wants proving;
Unless you can swear, 'For life, for death!'—
Oh, fear to call it loving!

V.

Unless you can muse in a crowd all day,
On the absent face that fixed you;
Unless you can love, as the angels may,
With the breadth of heaven betwixt you;
Unless you can dream that his faith is fast,
Through behoving and unbehoving;
Unless you can die when the dream is past—
Oh, never call it loving!

A MAN'S REQUIREMENTS.

I.

LOVE me, Sweet, with all thou art,
Feeling, thinking, seeing ;
Love me in the lightest part,
Love me in full being.

II.

Love me with thine open youth
In its frank surrender ;
With the vowing of thy mouth,
With its silence tender.

III.

Love me with thine azure eyes,
Made for earnest granting ;
Taking colour from the skies,
Can Heaven's truth be wanting ?

IV.

Love me with their lids, that fall
Snow-like at first meeting;
Love me with thine heart, that all
Neighbours then see beating.

V.

Love me with thine hand stretched out
Freely—open-minded:
Love me with thy loitering foot,—
Hearing one behind it.

VI.

Love me with thy voice, that turns
Sudden faint above me;
Love me with thy blush that burns
When I murmur, Love me!

VII.

Love me with thy thinking soul,
Break it to love-sighing;
Love me with thy thoughts that roll
On through living—dying.

VIII.

Love me in thy gorgeous airs,
When the world has crowned thee;
Love me, kneeling at thy prayers,
With the angels round thee.

IX.

Love me pure, as musers do,
Up the woodlands shady :
Love me gaily, fast and true,
As a winsome lady.

X.

Through all hopes that keep us brave,
Further off or nigher,
Love me for the house and grave,
And for something higher.

XI.

Thus, if thou wilt prove me, Dear
Woman's love no fable,
I will love thee—half a year—
As a man is able.

A YEAR'S SPINNING.

I.

HE listened at the porch that day,
To hear the wheel go on, and on;
And then it stopped, ran back away,
While through the door he brought the sun.
But now my spinning is all done.

II.

He sate beside me, with an oath
That love ne'er ended, once begun:
I smiled—believing for us both,
What was the truth for only one.
And now my spinning is all done.

III.

My mother cursed me that I heard
A young man's wooing as I spun:
Thanks, cruel mother, for that word,—
For I have, since, a harder known!
And now my spinning is all done.

IV.

I thought—O God!—my first-born's cry
Both voices to mine ear would drown:
I listened in mine agony—
It was the silence made me groan!
And now my spinning is all done.

V.

Bury me 'twixt my mother's grave,
(Who cursed me on her death-bed lone)
And my dead baby's (God it save!)
Who, not to bless me, would not moan.
And now my spinning is all done.

VI.

A stone upon my heart and head,
But no name written on the stone!
Sweet neighbours, whisper low instead,
'This sinner was a loving one—
And now her spinning is all done.'

VII.

And let the door ajar remain,
In case he should pass by anon;
And leave the wheel out very plain,—
That HE, when passing in the sun,
May see the spinning is all done.

CHANGE UPON CHANGE.

I.

FIVE months ago, the stream did flow,
The lilies bloomed within the sedge,
And we were lingering to and fro,
Where none will track thee in this snow,
Along the stream, beside the hedge.
Ah, Sweet, be free to love and go!
For if I do not hear thy foot,
The frozen river is as mute,
The flowers have dried down to the root :
And why, since these be changed since May,
Shouldst thou change less than they?

II.

And slow, slow as the winter snow,
The tears have drifted to mine eyes;
And my poor cheeks, five months ago
Set blushing at thy praises so,
Put paleness on for a disguise.

Ah, Sweet, be free to praise and go!
For if my face is turned too pale,
It was thine oath that first did fail,—
It was thy love proved false and frail:
And why, since these be changed enow,
Should I change less than thou?

THAT DAY.

I.

I STAND by the river where both of us stood,
And there is but one shadow to darken the flood ;
And the path leading to it, where both used to pass,
Has the step but of one, to take dew from the grass,—
One forlorn since that day.

II.

The flowers of the margin are many to see ;
None stoops at my bidding to pluck them for me.
The bird in the alder sings loudly and long,—
My low sound of weeping disturbs not his song,
As thy vow did, that day.

III.

I stand by the river, I think of the vow ;
Oh, calm as the place is, vow-breaker, be thou !
I leave the flower growing, the bird unproved ;
Would I trouble thee rather than them, my beloved,—
And my lover that day ?

IV.

Go, be sure of my love, by that treason forgiven;
Of my prayers, by the blessings they win thee from Heaven;

Of my grief—(guess the length of the sword by the sheath's)

By the silence of life, more pathetic than death's!

Go,—be clear of that day!

A REED.

I.

I AM no trumpet, but a reed ;
No flattering breath shall from me lead
 A silver sound, a hollow sound :
I will not ring, for priest or king,
One blast that in re-echoing
 Would leave a bondsman faster bound.

II.

I am no trumpet, but a reed,—
A broken reed, the wind indeed
 Left flat upon a dismal shore ;
Yet if a little maid or child
Should sigh within it, earnest-mild
 This reed will answer evermore.

III.

I am no trumpet, but a reed ;
Go, tell the fishers, as they spread
 Their nets along the river's edge,
I will not tear their nets at all,
Nor pierce their hands, if they should fall :
 Then let them leave me in the sedge.

THE DEAD PAN.

Excited by Schiller's 'Götter Griechenlands,' and partly founded on a well-known tradition mentioned in a treatise of Plutarch ('De Oraculorum Defectu'), according to which, at the hour of the Saviour's agony, a cry of 'Great Pan is dead!' swept across the waves in the hearing of certain mariners,—and the oracles ceased.

It is in all veneration to the memory of the deathless Schiller, that I oppose a doctrine still more dishonouring to poetry than to Christianity.

As Mr. Kenyon's graceful and harmonious paraphrase of the German poem was the first occasion of the turning of my thoughts in this direction, I take advantage of the pretence to indulge my feelings (which overflow on other grounds) by inscribing my lyric to that dear friend and relative, with the earnestness of appreciating esteem as well as of affectionate gratitude. 1844.

I.

GODS of Hellas, gods of Hellas,
Can ye listen in your silence?
Can your mystic voices tell us
Where ye hide? In floating islands,
With a wind that evermore
Keeps you out of sight of shore?
Pan, Pan is dead.

II.

In what revels are ye sunken,
In old Æthiopia?
Have the Pygmies made you drunken,
Bathing in mandragora

Your divine pale lips, that shiver
Like the lotus in the river?

Pan, Pan is dead.

III.

Do ye sit there still in slumber,
In gigantic Alpine rows?
The black poppies out of number
Nodding, dripping from your brows
To the red lees of your wine,
And so kept alive and fine?

Pan, Pan is dead.

IV.

Or lie crushed your stagnant corpses
Where the silver spheres roll on,
Stung to life by centric forces
Thrown like rays out from the sun?—
While the smoke of your old altars
Is the shroud that round you welters?
Great Pan is dead.

V.

‘ Gods of Hellas, gods of Hellas ’
Said the old Hellenic tongue,—
Said the hero-oaths, as well as Poets’ songs the sweetest sung :
Have ye grown deaf in a day ?
Can ye speak not yea or nay,
Since Pan is dead ?

VI

Do ye leave your rivers flowing
All alone, O Naiades,
While your drenchèd locks dry slow in
This cold feeble sun and breeze?
Not a word the Naiads say,
Though the rivers run for aye;
For Pan is dead.

VII.

From the gloaming of the oak-wood,
O ye Dryads, could ye flee?
At the rushing thunderstroke, would
No sob tremble through the tree?
Not a word the Dryads say,
Though the forests wave for aye;
For Pan is dead.

VIII.

Have ye left the mountain places
Oreads wild, for other tryst?
Shall we see no sudden faces
Strike a glory through the mist?
Not a sound the silence thrills
Of the everlasting hills:
Pan, Pan is dead.

IX.

O twelve gods of Plato's vision,
Crowned to starry wanderings,
With your chariots in procession,
And your silver clash of wings!
Very pale ye seem to rise,
Ghosts of Grecian deities,
Now Pan is dead!

X.

Jove, that right hand is unloaded,
Whence the thunder did prevail,
While in idiocy of godhead
Thou art staring the stars pale!
And thine eagle, blind and old,
Roughs his feathers in the cold.
Pan, Pan is dead.

XI.

Where, O Juno, is the glory
Of thy regal look and tread?
Will they lay, for evermore, thee,
On thy dim, straight, golden bed?
Will thy queendom all lie hid
Meekly under either lid?
Pan, Pan is dead.

XII.

Ha, Apollo! floats his golden
Hair all mist-like where he stands,
While the Muses hang enfolding
Knee and foot with faint wild hands?
'Neath the clanging of thy bow,
Niobe looked lost as thou!

Pan, Pan is dead.

XIII.

Shall the casque with its brown iron,
Pallas' broad blue eyes, eclipse,
And no hero take inspiring
From the god-Greek of her lips?
'Neath her olive dost thou sit,
Mars the mighty, cursing it?

Pan, Pan is dead.

XIV.

Bacchus, Bacchus! on the panther
He swoons, bound with his own vines;
And his Mænads slowly saunter,
Head aside, among the pines,
While they murmur dreamingly,
'Evohe—ah—evohe—!

Ah, Pan is dead!

XV.

Neptune lies beside the trident,
Dull and senseless as a stone ;
And old Pluto deaf and silent
Is cast out into the sun :
Ceres smileth stern thereat,
' We all now are desolate
Now Pan is dead.'

XVI.

Aphrodite ! dead and driven
As thy native foam, thou art ;
With the cestus long done heaving
On the white calm of thine heart !
Ai Adonis ! at that shriek,
Not a tear runs down her cheek—
Pan, Pan is dead.

XVII.

And the Loves, we used to know from
One another, huddled lie,
Frore as taken in a snow-storm,
Close beside her tenderly ;
As if each had weakly tried
Once to kiss her as he died.
Pan, Pan is dead.

XVIII.

What, and Hermes? Time enthralleth
All thy cunning, Hermes, thus,
And the ivy blindly crawleth
Round thy brave caduceus?
Hast thou no new message for us,
Full of thunder and Jove-glories?
Nay, Pan is dead.

XIX.

Crown'd Cybele's great turret
Rocks and crumbles on her head;
Roar the lions of her chariot
Toward the wilderness, unfed:
Scornful children are not mute,—
'Mother, mother, walk afoot
Since Pan is dead!'

XX.

In the fiery-hearted centre
Of the solemn universe,
Ancient Vesta,—who could enter
To consume thee with this curse?
Drop thy grey chin on thy knee,
O thou palsied Mystery!
For Pan is dead.

XXI.

Gods, we vainly do adjure you,—
 Ye return nor voice nor sign!
 Not a votary could secure you
 Even a grave for your Divine:
 Not a grave, to show thereby,
Here these grey old gods do lie.

Pan, Pan is dead.

XXII.

Even that Greece who took your wages,
 Calls the obolus outworn;
 And the hoarse deep-throated ages
 Laugh your godships unto scorn:
 And the poets do disclaim you,
 Or grow colder if they name you—
 And Pan is dead.

XXIII.

Gods bereav'd, gods belated,
 With your purples rent asunder!
 Gods discrowned and desecrated,
 Disinherited of thunder!
 Now, the goats may climb and crop
 The soft grass on Ida's top—
 Now, Pan is dead.

XXIV.

Calm, of old, the bark went onward,
When a cry more loud than wind,
Rose up, deepened, and swept sunward,
From the piled Dark behind;
And the sun shrank and grew pale,
Breathed against by the great wail—
‘Pan, Pan is dead.’

XXV.

And the rowers from the benches
Fell, each shuddering on his face,
While departing Influences
Struck a cold back through the place;
And the shadow of the ship
Reeled along the passive deep—
‘Pan, Pan is dead.’

XXVI.

And that dismal cry rose slowly
And sank slowly through the air,
Full of spirit’s melancholy
And eternity’s despair!
And they heard the words it said—
PAN IS DEAD—GREAT PAN IS DEAD—
PAN, PAN IS DEAD.

XXVII.

'Twas the hour when One in Sion
Hung for love's sake on a cross ;
When His brow was chill with dying,
And His soul was faint with loss ;
When His priestly blood dropped downward,
And His kingly eyes looked throneward—
Then, Pan was dead.

XXVIII.

By the love He stood alone in,
His sole Godhead rose complete,
And the false gods fell down moaning,
Each from off his golden seat ;
All the false gods with a cry
Rendered up their deity—
Pan, Pan was dead,

XXIX.

Wailing wide across the islands,
They rent, vest-like, their Divine ;
And a darkness and a silence
Quenched the light of every shrine ;
And Dodona's oak swang lonely
Henceforth, to the tempest only,
Pan, Pan was dead,

XXX.

Pythia staggered, feeling o'er her
Her lost god's forsaking look ;
Straight her eyeballs filmed with horror,
And her crispy fillets shook,
And her lips gasped through their foam,
For a word that did not come.

Pan, Pan was dead.

XXXI.

O ye vain false gods of Hellas,
Ye are silent evermore !
And I dash down this old chalice
Whence libations ran of yore.
See, the wine crawls in the dust
Wormlike—as your glories must,
Since Pan is dead,

XXXII.

Get to dust, as common mortals,
By a common doom and track !
Let no Schiller from the portals
Of that Hades call you back,
Or instruct us to weep all
At your antique funeral.

Pan, Pan is dead,

XXXIII.

By your beauty, which confesses
 Some chief Beauty conquering you,—
 By our grand heroic guesses
 Through your falsehood at the True,—
 We will weep not ! earth shall roll
 Heir to each god's aureole—
And Pan is dead.

XXXIV.

Earth outgrows the mythic fancies
 Sung beside her in her youth,
 And those debonair romances
 Sound but dull beside the truth.
 Phœbus' chariot-course is run :
 Look up, poets, to the sun !
Pan, Pan is dead.

XXXV.

Christ hath sent us down the angels ;
 And the whole earth and the skies
 Are illumed by altar-candles
 Lit for blessèd mysteries ;
 And a Priest's hand through creation
 Waveth calm and consecration :
And Pan is dead.

XXXVI.

Truth is fair : should we forgo it ?
 Can we sigh right for a wrong ?
 God himself is the best Poet,
 And the Real is His song.
 Sing His truth out fair and full,
 And secure His beautiful.

Let Pan be dead.

XXXVII.

Truth is large : our aspiration
 Scarce embraces half we be.
 Shame, to stand in His creation
 And doubt truth's sufficiency !—
 To think God's song unexcelling
 The poor tales of our own telling—

When Pan is dead !

XXXVIII.

What is true and just and honest,
 What is lovely, what is pure,
 All of praise that hath admonisht,
 All of virtue, shall endure ;
 These are themes for poets' uses,
 Stirring nobler than the Muses,

Ere Pan was dead.

XXXIX.

O brave poets, keep back nothing,
Nor mix falsehood with the whole ;
Look up Godward ; speak the truth in Worthy song from earnest soul :
Hold, in high poetic duty,
Truest Truth the fairest Beauty !
Pan, Pan is dead.

A CHILD'S GRAVE AT FLORENCE.

A.A.E.C.

BORN, JULY, 1848. DIED, NOVEMBER, 1849.

I.

OF English blood, of Tuscan birth,
What country should we give her ?
Instead of any on the earth,
The civic Heavens receive her.

II.

And here among the English tombs
In Tuscan ground we lay her,
While the blue Tuscan sky endomes
Our English words of prayer.

III.

A little child !—how long she lived,
By months, not years, is reckoned :
Born in one July, she survived
Alone to see a second.

IV.

Bright-featured, as the July sun
Her little face still played in,
And splendours, with her birth begun,
Had had no time for fading.

V.

So, LILY, from those July hours,
No wonder we should call her;
She looked such kinship to the flowers,
Was but a little taller.

VI.

A Tuscan Lily,—only white,
As Dante, in abhorrence
Of red corruption, wished aright
The lilies of his Florence.

VII.

We could not wish her whiter,—her
Who perfumed with pure blossom
The house—a lovely thing to wear
Upon a mother's bosom!

VIII.

This July creature thought perhaps
Our speech not worth assuming;
She sate upon her parents' laps
And mimicked the guat's humming;

IX.

Said 'father,' 'mother'—then left off,
For tongues celestial, fitter :
Her hair had grown just long enough
To catch heaven's jasper-glitter.

X.

Babes ! Love could always hear and see
Behind the cloud that hid them.
' Let little children come to Me,
And do not thou forbid them.'

XI.

So, unforbidding, have we met,
And gently here have laid her.
Though winter is no time to get
The flowers that should o'er-spread her :

XII.

We should bring pansies quick with spring,
Rose, violet, daffodilly,
And also, above everything,
White lilies for our Lily.

XIII.

Nay, more than flowers, this grave exacts,—
Glad, grateful attestations
Of her sweet eyes and pretty acts,
With calm renunciations.

XIV.

Her very mother with light feet
Should leave the place too earthy,
Saying, 'The angels have thee, Sweet,
Because we are not worthy.'

XV.

But winter kills the orange-buds,
The gardens in the frost are,
And all the heart dissolves in floods,
Remembering we have lost her.

XVI.

Poor earth, poor heart,—too weak, too weak
To miss the July shining!
Poor heart!—what bitter words we speak
When God speaks of resigning!

XVII.

Sustain this heart in us that faints,
Thou God, the self-existent!
We catch up wild at parting saints
And feel Thy heaven too distant.

XVIII.

The wind that swept them out of sin,
Has ruffled all our vesture:
On the shut door that let them in,
We beat with frantic gesture,—

XIX.

To us, us also, open straight !
The outer life is chilly ;
Are we too, like the earth, to wait
Till next year for our Lily ?

XX.

—Oh, my own baby on my knees
My leaping, dimpled treasure,
At every word I write like these,
Clasped close with stronger pressure !

XXI.

Too well my own heart understands,—
At every word beats fuller—
My little feet, my little hands,
And hair of Lily's colour !

XXII.

But God gives patience, Love learns strength,
And Faith remembers promise,
And Hope itself can smile at length
On other hopes gone from us.

XXIII.

Love, strong as Death, shall conquer Death,
Through struggle, made more glorious :
This mother stills her sobbing breath,
Renouncing yet victorious.

XXIV.

Arms, empty of her child, she lifts
With spirit unbereaven,—
'God will not all take back His gifts ;
My Lily's mine in heaven.

XXV.

'Still mine ! maternal rights serene
Not given to another !
The crystal bars shine faint between
The souls of child and mother.

XXVI.

'Meanwhile,' the mother cries, 'content !
Our love was well divided :
Its sweetness following where she went,
Its anguish stayed where I did.

XXVII.

'Well done of God, to halve the lot,
And give her all the sweetness ;
To us, the empty room and cot,—
To her, the Heaven's completeness.

XXVIII.

'To us, this grave,—to her, the rows
The mystic palm-trees spring in ;
To us, the silence in the house,—
To her, the choral singing.

XXIX.

'For her, to gladden in God's view,—
For us, to hope and bear on.
Grow, Lily, in thy garden new,
Beside the Rose of Sharon!

XXX.

'Grow fast in heaven, sweet Lily clipped,
In love more calm than this is,
And may the angels dewy-lipped
Remind thee of our kisses!

XXXI.

'While none shall tell thee of our tears.
These human tears now falling,
Till, after a few patient years,
One home shall take us all in.

XXXII.

'Child, father, mother—who, left out?
Not mother, and not father!
And when, our dying couch about,
The natural mists shall gather,

XXXIII.

'Some smiling angel close shall stand
In old Correggio's fashion,
And bear a LILY in his hand,
For death's ANNUNCIATION.'

CATARINA TO CAMOENS;

DYING IN HIS ABSENCE ABROAD, AND REFERRING TO THE POEM IN WHICH HE RECORDED THE SWEETNESS OF HER EYES.

I.

ON the door you will not enter,
I have gazed too long : adieu !
Hope withdraws her peradventure ;
Death is near me,—and not you.
Come, O lover,
Close and cover
These poor eyes, you called, I ween,
‘Sweetest eyes, were ever seen !’

II.

When I heard you sing that burden
In my vernal days and bowers,
Other praises disregarding,
I but harkened that of yours—
Only saying
In heart-playing,
‘Blessed eyes mine eyes have been,
If the sweetest, HIS have seen !’

III.

But all changes. At this vesper,
Cold the sun shines down the door.
If you stood there, would you whisper
‘Love, I love you,’ as before,— Death pervading
Now, and shading
Eyes you sang of, that yestreen,
As the sweetest ever seen?

IV.

Yes. I think, were you beside them,
Near the bed I die upon,
Though their beauty you denied them,
As you stood there, looking down,
You would truly
Call them duly,
For the love’s sake found therein,
‘Sweetest eyes, were ever seen.’

V.

And if you looked down upon them,
And if they looked up to you,
All the light which has foregone them
Would be gathered back anew:
They would truly
Be as duly
Love-transformed to beauty’s sheen,
‘Sweetest eyes, were ever seen.’

VI.

But, ah me! you only see me,
In your thoughts of loving man,
Smiling soft perhaps and dreamy
Through the wavings of my fan;
And unweeting
Go repeating,
In your reverie serene,
'Sweetest eyes, were ever seen—'

VII.

While my spirit leans and reaches
From my body still and pale,
Fain to hear what tender speech is
In your love to help my bale.
O my poet,
Come and show it!
Come, of latest love, to glean
'Sweetest eyes, were ever seen.'

VIII.

O my poet, O my prophet,
When you praised their sweetness so,
Did you think, in singing of it,
That it might be near to go?
Had you fancies
From their glances,
That the grave would quickly screen
'Sweetest eyes, were ever seen?'

IX.

No reply. The fountain's warble
In the courtyard sounds alone.
As the water to the marble
So my heart falls with a moan
From love-sighing
To this dying.
Death forerunneth Love to win
'Sweetest eyes, were ever seen.'

X.

Will you come? When I'm departed
Where all sweetnesses are hid,
Where thy voice, my tender-hearted,
Will not lift up either lid.
Cry, O lover,
Love is over!
Cry, beneath the cypress green,
'Sweetest eyes, were ever seen!'

XI.

When the angelus is ringing,
Near the convent will you walk,
And recall the choral singing
Which brought angels down our talk?
Spirit-shriven
I viewed Heaven,
Till you smiled—'Is earth unclean,
'Sweetest eyes, were ever seen?'

XII.

When beneath the palace-lattice
You ride slow as you have done,
And you see a face there, that is
Not the old familiar one,—
Will you oftly
Murmur softly,
‘Here ye watched me morn and e’en,
Sweetest eyes, were ever seen!’

XIII.

When the palace-ladies, sitting
Round your gittern, shall have said,
‘Poet, sing those verses written
For the lady who is dead,’
Will you tremble
Yet dissemble,—
Or sing hoarse, with tears between,
‘Sweetest eyes, were ever seen?’

XIV.

‘Sweetest eyes!’ how sweet in flowings
The repeated cadence is!
Though you sang a hundred poems,
Still the best one would be this.
I can hear it
’Twixt my spirit
And the earth-noise intervene—
‘Sweetest eyes, were ever seen!’

XV.

But the priest waits for the praying,
 And the choir are on their knees,
 And the soul must pass away in
 Strains more solemn-high than these.

Miserere

For the weary !
 Oh, no longer for Catrine
 ‘ Sweetest eyes, were ever seen !’

XVI.

Keep my riband, take and keep it,
 (I have loosed it from my hair)*
 Feeling, while you overweep it,
 Not alone in your despair,
 Since with saintly
 Watch unfaintly
 Out of heaven shall o’er you lean
 ‘ Sweetest eyes, were ever seen.’

XVII.

But—but now—yet unremovèd
 Up to heaven, they glisten fast ;
 You may cast away, Belovèd,
 In your future all my past :
 Such old phrases
 May be praises
 For some fairer bosom-queen—
 ‘ Sweetest eyes, were ever seen !’

* She left him the riband from her hair.

XVIII.

Eyes of mine, what are ye doing?
Faithless, faithless,—praised amiss
If a tear be of your showing,
Dropt for any hope of HIS!
Death has boldness
Besides coldness,
If unworthy tears demean
'Sweetest eyes, were ever seen.'

XIX.

I will look out to his future;
I will bless it till it shine.
Should he ever be a suitor
Unto sweeter eyes than mine,
Sunshine gild them,
Angels shield them,
Whatsoever eyes terrene
Be the sweetest HIS have seen!

LIFE AND LOVE.

I.

FAST this Life of mine was dying,
Blind already and calm as death,
Snowflakes on her bosom lying
Scarcely heaving with her breath.

II.

Love came by, and having known her
In a dream of fabled lands,
Gently stooped, and laid upon her
Mystic chrism of holy hands ;

III.

Drew his smile across her folded
Eyelids, as the swallow dips ;
Breathed as finely as the cold did,
Through the locking of her lips.

IV.

So, when Life looked upward, being
Warmed and breathed on from above,
What sight could she have for seeing,
Evermore . . . but only LOVE ?

A DENIAL.

I.

WE have met late—it is too late to meet,
O friend, not more than friend !
Death's forecome shroud is tangled round my feet.
And if I step or stir, I touch the end.
In this last jeopardy
Can I approach thee, I, who cannot move ?
How shall I answer thy request for love ?
Look in my face and see.

II.

I love thee not, I dare not love thee ! go
In silence ; drop my hand.
If thou seek roses, seek them where they blow
In garden-alleys, not in desert-sand.
Can life and death agree,
That thou shouldst stoop thy song to my complaint ?
I cannot love thee. If the word is faint,
Look in my face and see.

III.

I might have loved thee in some former days.
Oh, then, my spirits had leapt
As now they sink, at hearing thy love-praise!
Before these faded cheeks were overwept,
Had this been asked of me,
To love thee with my whole strong heart and head,—
I should have said still . . . yes, but smiled and said,
‘Look in my face and see!’

IV.

But now . . . God sees me, God, who took my heart
And drowned it in life's surge.
In all your wide warm earth I have no part—
A light song overcomes me like a dirge.
Could Love's great harmony
The saints keep step to when their bonds are loose,
Not weigh me down? am I a wife to choose?
Look in my face and see—

V.

While I behold, as plain as one who dreams,
Some woman of full worth,
Whose voice, as cadenced as a silver stream's,
Shall prove the fountain-soul which sends it forth;
One younger, more thought-free
And fair and gay, than I, thou must forget,
With brighter eyes than these . . . which are not wet..
Look in my face and see!

VI.

So farewell thou, whom I have known too late

To let thee come so near.

Be counted happy while men call thee great,

And one belovèd woman feels thee dear!—

Not I!—that cannot be.

I am lost, I am changed,—I must go farther, where

The change shall take me worse, and no one dare

Look in my face and see.

VII.

Meantime I bless thee. By these thoughts of mine

I bless thee from all such!

I bless thy lamp to oil, thy cup to wine,

Thy hearth to joy, thy hand to an equal touch

Of loyal troth. For me,

I love thee not, I love thee not!—away!

Here's no more courage in my soul to say

‘Look in my face and see.’

PROOF AND DISPROOF.

I.

Dost thou love me, my Belovëd ?
Who shall answer yes or no ?
What is provëd or disprovëd
When my soul inquireth so,
Dost thou love me, my Belovëd ?

II.

I have seen thy heart to-day,
Never open to the crowd,
While to love me aye and aye
Was the vow as it was vowed
By thine eyes of steadfast grey.

III.

Now I sit alone, alone—
And the hot tears break and burn.
Now, Belovëd, thou art gone,
Doubt and terror have their turn.
Is it love that I have known ?

IV.

I have known some bitter things,—
 Anguish, anger, solitude.
 Year by year an evil brings,
 Year by year denies a good ;
 March winds violate my springs.

V.

I have known how sickness bends,
 I have known how sorrow breaks,—
 How quick hopes have sudden ends,
 How the heart thinks till it aches
 Of the smile of buried friends.

VI.

Last, I have known thee, my brave
 Noble thinker, lover, doer !
 The best knowledge last I have.
 But thou comest as the thrower
 Of fresh flowers upon a grave.

VII.

Count what feelings used to move me !
 Can this love assort with those ?
 Thou, who art so far above me,
 Wilt thou stoop so, for repose ?
 Is it true that thou canst love me ?

VIII.

Do not blame me if I doubt thee.
I can call love by its name
When thine arm is wrapt about me;
But even love seems not the same,
When I sit alone, without thee.

IX.

In thy clear eyes I descried
Many a proof of love, to-day;
But to-night, those unbelied
Speechful eyes being gone away,
There's the proof to seek, beside.

X.

Dost thou love me, my Belovëd?
Only thou canst answer yes!
And, thou gone, the proof's disprovëd,
And the cry rings answerless—
Dost thou love me, my Belovëd?

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

I.

LOVE you seek for, presupposes
Summer heat and sunny glow.
Tell me, do you find moss-roses
Budding, blooming in the snow ?
Snow might kill the rose-tree's root—
Shake it quickly from your foot,
Lest it harm you as you go.

II.

From the ivy where it dapples
A grey ruin, stone by stone,
Do you look for grapes or apples,
Or for sad green leaves alone ?
Pluck the leaves off, two or three—
Keep them for morality
When you shall be safe and gone.

INCLUSIONS.

I.

OH, wilt thou have my hand, Dear, to lie along in thine?
As a little stone in a running stream, it seems to lie and pine.

Now drop the poor pale hand, Dear, unfit to plight with thine.

II.

Oh, wilt thou have my cheek, Dear, drawn closer to thine own?

My cheek is white, my cheek is worn, by many a tear run down.

Now leave a little space, Dear, lest it should wet
thine own.

III.

Oh, must thou have my soul, Dear, commingled with thy soul?—

Red grows the cheek, and warm the hand; the part is in the whole:

Nor hands nor cheeks keep separate, when soul is joined to soul.

INSUFFICIENCY.

I.

THERE IS no one beside thee and no one above thee,
Thou standest alone as the nightingale sings !
And my words that would praise thee are impotent things,
For none can express thee though all should approve thee.
I love thee so, Dear, that I only can love thee.

II.

SAY, what can I do for thee ? weary thee, grieve thee ?
Lean on thy shoulder, new burdens to add ?
Weep my tears over thee, making thee sad ?
Oh, hold me not—love me not ! let me retrieve thee.
I love thee so, Dear, that I only can leave thee.

SONNETS FROM THE PORTUGUESE.

I.

I THOUGHT once how Theocritus had sung
Of the sweet years, the dear and wished-for years,
Who each one in a gracious hand appears
To bear a gift for mortals, old or young :
And, as I mused it in his antique tongue,
I saw, in gradual vision through my tears,
The sweet, sad years, the melancholy years,
Those of my own life, who by turns had flung
A shadow across me. Straightway I was 'ware,
So weeping, how a mystic Shape did move
Behind me, and drew me backward by the hair ;
And a voice said in mastery, while I strove,—
' Guess now who holds thee ?'—' Death,' I said. But,
there,
The silver answer rang,—' Not Death, but Love.'

II.

BUT only three in all God's universe
Have heard this word thou hast said,—Himself, beside Thee speaking, and me listening ! and replied
One of us . . . that was God, . . . and laid the curse
So darkly on my eyelids, as to amerce
My sight from seeing thee,—that if I had died,
The deathweights, placed there, would have signified
Less absolute exclusion. 'Nay' is worse
From God than from all others, O my friend !
Men could not part us with their worldly jars,
Nor the seas change us, nor the tempests bend ;
Our hands would touch for all the mountain-bars :
And, heaven being rolled between us at the end,
We should but vow the faster for the stars.

III.

UNLIKE are we, unlike, O princely Heart !
Unlike our uses and our destinies.
Our ministering two angels look surprise
On one another, as they strike athwart
Their wings in passing. Thou, bethink thee, art
A guest for queens to social pageantries,
With gages from a hundred brighter eyes
Than tears even can make mine, to play thy part
Of chief musician. What hast thou to do
With looking from the lattice-lights at me,
A poor, tired, wandering singer, singing through
The dark, and leaning up a cypress tree ?
The chrism is on thine head,—on mine, the dew,—
And Death must dig the level where these agree.

IV.

THOU hast thy calling to some palace-floor,
Most gracious singer of high poems ! where
The dancers will break footing, from the care
Of watching up thy pregnant lips for more.
And dost thou lift this house's latch too poor
For hand of thine ? and canst thou think and bear
To let thy music drop here unaware
In folds of golden fulness at my door ?
Look up and see the casement broken in,
The bats and owlets builders in the roof !
My cricket chirps against thy mandolin.
Hush, call no echo up in further proof
Of desolation ! there's a voice within
That weeps . . as thou must sing . . alone, aloof.

V.

I LIFT my heavy heart up solemnly,
As once Electra her sepulchral urn,
And, looking in thine eyes, I overturn
The ashes at thy feet. Behold and see
What a great heap of grief lay hid in me,
And how the red wild sparkles dimly burn
Through the ashen greyness. If thy foot in scorn
Could tread them out to darkness utterly,
It might be well perhaps. But if instead
Thou wait beside me for the wind to blow
The grey dust up, . . . those laurels on thine head,
O my Belovéd, will not shield thee so, '
That none of all the fires shall scorch and shred
The hair beneath. Stand further off then! go.

VI.

Go from me. Yet I feel that I shall stand
Henceforward in thy shadow. Nevermore
Alone upon the threshold of my door
Of individual life, I shall command
The uses of my soul, nor lift my hand
Serenely in the sunshine as before,
Without the sense of that which I forbore—
Thy touch upon the palm. The widest land
Doom takes to part us, leaves thy heart in mine
With pulses that beat double. What I do
And what I dream include thee, as the wine
Must taste of its own grapes. And when I sue
God for myself, He hears that name of thine,
And sees within my eyes the tears of two.

VII.

THE face of all the world is changed, I think,
Since first I heard the footsteps of thy soul
Move still, oh, still, beside me, as they stole
Betwixt me and the dreadful outer brink
Of obvious death, where I, who thought to sink,
Was caught up into love, and taught the whole
Of life in a new rhythm. The cup of dole
God gave for baptism, I am fain to drink,
And praise its sweetness, Sweet, with thee anear.
The names of country, heaven, are changed away
For where thou art or shalt be, there or here;
And this . . . this lute and song . . . loved yesterday,
(The singing angels know) are only dear
Because thy name moves right in what they say.

VIII.

WHAT can I give thee back, O liberal
And princely giver, who hast brought the gold
And purple of thine heart, unstained, untold,
And laid them on the outside of the wall
For such as I to take or leave withal,
In unexpected largesse? am I cold,
Ungrateful, that for these most manifold
High gifts, I render nothing back at all?
Not so; not cold,—but very poor instead.
Ask God who knows. For frequent tears have run
The colours from my life, and left so dead
And pale a stuff, it were not fitly done
To give the same as pillow to thy head.
Go farther! let it serve to trample on.

IX.

CAN it be right to give what I can give ?
To let thee sit beneath the fall of tears
As salt as mine, and hear the sighing years
Re-sighing on my lips renunciative
Through those infrequent smiles which fail to live
For all thy adjurations ? O my fears,
That this can scarce be right ! We are not peers,
So to be lovers ; and I own, and grieve,
That givers of such gifts as mine are, must
Be counted with the ungenerous. Out, alas !
I will not soil thy purple with my dust,
Nor breathe my poison on thy Venice-glass,
Nor give thee any love—which were unjust.
Beloved, I only love thee ! let it pass.

X

YET, love, mere love, is beautiful indeed
And worthy of acceptation. Fire is bright,
Let temple burn, or flax ; an equal light
Leaps in the flame from cedar-plank or weed :
And love is fire. And when I say at need
I love thee . . mark ! . . I love thee—in thy sight
I stand transfigured, glorified aright,
With conscience of the new rays that proceed
Out of my face toward thine. There's nothing low
In love, when love the lowest : meanest creatures
Who love God, God accepts while loving so.
And what I feel, across the inferior features
Of what I am, doth flash itself, and show
How that great work of Love enhances Nature's.

XI.

AND therefore if to love can be desert,
I am not all unworthy. Cheeks as pale
As these you see, and trembling knees that fail
To bear the burden of a heavy heart,—
This weary minstrel-life that once was girt
To climb Aornus, and can scarce avail
To pipe now 'gainst the valley nightingale
A melancholy music,—why advert
To these things? O Belovèd, it is plain
I am not of thy worth nor for thy place!
And yet, because I love thee, I obtain
From that same love this vindicating grace,
To live on still in love, and yet in vain,—
To bless thee, yet renounce thee to thy face.

XII.

INDEED this very love which is my boast,
And which, when rising up from breast to brow,
Doth crown me with a ruby large enow
To draw men's eyes and prove the inner cost,—
This love even, all my worth, to the uttermost,
I should not love withal, unless that thou
Hadst set me an example, shown me how,
When first thine earnest eyes with mine were crossed,
And love called love. And thus, I cannot speak
Of love even, as a good thing of my own:
Thy soul hath snatched up mine all faint and weak,
And placed it by thee on a golden throne,—
And that I love (O soul, we must be meek!)
Is by thee only, whom I love alone.

XIII.

AND wilt thou have me fashion into speech
The love I bear thee, finding words enough,
And hold the torch out, while the winds are rough,
Between our faces, to cast light on each?—
I drop it at thy feet. I cannot teach
My hand to hold my spirit so far off
From myself—me—that I should bring thee proof
In words, of love hid in me out of reach.
Nay, let the silence of my womanhood
Commend my woman-love to thy belief,—
Seeing that I stand unwon, however wooed,
And rend the garment of my life, in brief,
By a most dauntless, voiceless fortitude,
Lest one touch of this heart convey its grief.

XIV.

IF thou must love me, let it be for nought
Except for love's sake only. Do not say
'I love her for her smile—her look—her way
Of speaking gently,—for a trick of thought
That falls in well with mine, and certes brought
A sense of pleasant ease on such a day'—
For these things in themselves, Belovèd, may
Be changed, or change for thee,—and love, so wrought,
May be unwrought so. Neither love me for Thine own dear pity's wiping my cheeks dry,—
A creature might forget to weep, who bore
Thy comfort long, and lose thy love thereby!
But love me for love's sake, that evermore
Thou may'st love on, through love's eternity.

XV.

ACCUSE me not, beseech thee, that I wear
Too calm and sad a face in front of thine ;
For we two look two ways, and cannot shine
With the same sunlight on our brow and hair.
On me thou lookest with no doubting care,
As on a bee shut in a crystalline ;
Since sorrow hath shut me safe in love's divine,
And to spread wing and fly in the outer air
Were most impossible failure, if I strove
To fail so. But I look on thee—on thee—
Beholding, besides love, the end of love,
Hearing oblivion beyond memory ;
As one who sits and gazes from above,
Over the rivers to the bitter sea.

XVI.

AND yet, because thou overcomest so,
Because thou art more noble and like a king,
Thou canst prevail against my fears and fling
Thy purple round me, till my heart shall grow
Too close against thine heart henceforth to know
How it shook when alone. Why, conquering
May prove as lordly and complete a thing
In lifting upward, as in crushing low !
And as a vanquished soldier yields his sword
To one who lifts him from the bloody earth,
Even so, Belovéd, I at last record,
Here ends my strife. If thou invite me forth,
I rise above abasement at the word.
Make thy love larger to enlarge my worth.

XVII.

MY poet, thou canst touch on all the notes
God set between His After and Before,
And strike up and strike off the general roar
Of the rushing worlds a melody that floats
In a serene air purely. Antidotes
Of medicated music, answering for Mankind's forlornest uses, thou canst pour
From thence into their ears. God's will devotes Thine to such ends, and mine to wait on thine.
How, Dearest, wilt thou have me for most use?
A hope, to sing by gladly? or a fine
Sad memory, with thy songs to interfuse?
A shade, in which to sing—of palm or pine?
A grave, on which to rest from singing? Choose.

XVIII.

I NEVER gave a lock of hair away
To a man, Dearest, except this to thee,
Which now upon my fingers thoughtfully,
I ring out to the full brown length and say
‘Take it.’ My day of youth went yesterday ;
My hair no longer bounds to my foot’s glee,
Nor plant I it from rose or myrtle-tree,
As girls do, any more : it only may
Now shade on two pale cheeks the mark of tears,
Taught drooping from the head that hangs aside
Through sorrow’s trick. I thought the funeral-shears
Would take this first, but Love is justified,—
Take it thou,—finding pure, from all those years,
The kiss my mother left here when she died.

XIX.

THE soul's Rialto hath its merchandise ;
I barter curl for curl upon that mart,
And from my poet's forehead to my heart
Receive this lock which outweighs argosies,—
As purply black, as erst to Pindar's eyes
The dim purpureal tresses gloomed athwart
The nine white Muse-brows. For this counterpart,
The bay-crown's shade, Belovèd, I surmise,
Still lingers on thy curl, it is so black !
Thus, with a fillet of smooth-kissing breath,
I tie the shadows safe from gliding back,
And lay the gift where nothing hindereth ;
Here on my heart, as on thy brow, to lack
No natural heat till mine grows cold in death.

XX.

BELOVĒD, my Belovēd, when I think
That thou wast in the world a year ago,
What time I sate alone here in the snow
And saw no footprint, heard the silence sink
No moment at thy voice, but, link by link,
Went counting all my chains as if that so
They never could fall off at any blow
Struck by thy possible hand,—why, thus I drink
Of life's great cup of wonder! Wonderful,
Never to feel thee thrill the day or night
With personal act or speech,—nor ever cull
Some prescience of thee with the blossoms white
Thou sawest growing! Atheists are as dull,
Who cannot guess God's presence out of sight.

XXI.

SAY over again, and yet once over again,
That thou dost love me. 'Though the word repeated
Should seem 'a cuckoo-song,' as thou dost treat it.
Remember, never to the hill or plain,
Valley and wood, without her cuckoo-strain
Comes the fresh Spring in all her green completed.
Belovéd, I, amid the darkness greeted
By a doubtful spirit-voice, in that doubt's pain
Cry, 'Speak once more—thou lovest!' Who can fear
Too many stars, though each in heaven shall roll,
Too many flowers, though each shall crown the year?
Say thou dost love me, love me, love me—toll
The silver iterance!—only minding, Dear,
To love me also in silence with thy soul.

XXII.

WHEN our two souls stand up erect and strong,
Face to face, silent, drawing nigh and nigher,
Until the lengthening wings break into fire
At either curv'd point,—what bitter wrong
Can the earth do to us, that we should not long
Be here contented? Think. In mounting higher.
The angels would press on us and aspire
To drop some golden orb of perfect song
Into our deep, dear silence. Let us stay
Rather on earth, Belov'd,—where the unfit
Contrarious moods of men recoil away
And isolate pure spirits, and permit
A place to stand and love in for a day,
With darkness and the death-hour rounding it.

XXIII.

Is it indeed so ? If I lay here dead,
Wouldst thou miss any life in losing mine ?
And would the sun for thee more coldly shine
Because of grave-damps falling round my head ?
I marvelled, my Belovèd, when I read
Thy thought so in the letter. I am thine—
But . . . so much to thee ? Can I pour thy wine
While my hands tremble ? Then my soul, instead
Of dreams of death, resumes life's lower range.
Then, love me, Love ! look on me—breathe on me !
As brighter ladies do not count it strange,
For love, to give up acres and degree,
I yield the grave for thy sake, and exchange
My near sweet view of Heaven, for earth with thee !

XXIV.

LET the world's sharpness, like a clasping knife,
Shut in upon itself and do no harm
In this close hand of Love, now soft and warm,
And let us hear no sound of human strife
After the click of the shutting. Life to life—
I lean upon thee, Dear, without alarm,
And feel as safe as guarded by a charm
Against the stab of worldlings, who if rife
Are weak to injure. Very whitely still
The lilies of our lives may reassure
Their blossoms from their roots, accessible
Alone to heavenly dews that drop not fewer;
Growing straight, out of man's reach, on the hill.
God only, who made us rich, can make us poor.

XXV.

A HEAVY heart, Belovèd, have I borne
From year to year until I saw thy face,
And sorrow after sorrow took the place
Of all those natural joys as lightly worn
As the stringed pearls, each lifted in its turn
By a beating heart at dance-time. Hopes apace
Were changed to long despairs, till God's own grace
Could scarcely lift above the world forlorn
My heavy heart. Then thou didst bid me bring
And let it drop adown thy calmly great
Deep being! Fast it sinketh, as a thing
Which its own nature doth precipitate,
While thine doth close above it, mediating
Betwixt the stars and the unaccomplished fate.

XXVI.

I LIVED with visions for my company
Instead of men and women, years ago,
And found them gentle mates, nor thought to know
A sweeter music than they played to me.
But soon their trailing purple was not free
Of this world's dust, their lutes did silent grow.
And I myself grew faint and blind below
Their vanishing eyes. Then THOU didst come—to be,
Belov'd, what they seemed. Their shining fronts,
Their songs, their splendours, (better, yet the same,
As river-water hallowed into fonts)
Met in thee, and from out thee overcame
My soul with satisfaction of all wants:
Because God's gifts put man's best dreams to shame.

XXVII.

My own belov'd, who hast lifted me
From this drear flat of earth where I was thrown,
And, in betwixt the languid ringlets, blown
A life-breath, till the forehead hopefully
Shines out again, as all the angels see,
Before thy saving kiss ! My own, my own,
Who camest to me when the world was gone,
And I who looked for only God, found thee !
I find thee ; I am safe, and strong, and glad.
As one who stands in dewless asphodel,
Looks backward on the tedious time he had
In the upper life,—so I, with bosom-swell,
Make witness, here, between the good and bad,
That Love, as strong as Death, retrieves as well.

XXVIII.

MY letters ! all dead paper, mute and white !
And yet they seem alive and quivering
Against my tremulous hands which loose the string
And let them drop down on my knee to-night.
This said,—he wished to have me in his sight
Once, as a friend : this fixed a day in spring
To come and touch my hand . . . a simple thing,
Yet I wept for it !—this, . . the paper's light . .
Said, Dear, I love thee ; and I sank and quailed
As if God's future thundered on my past.
This said, I am thine—and so its ink has paled
With lying at my heart that beat too fast.
And this . . . O Love, thy words have ill availed
If, what this said, I dared repeat at last !

XXIX.

I THINK of thee!—my thoughts do twine and bud
About thee, as wild vines, about a tree,
Put out broad leaves, and soon there's nought to see
Except the straggling green which hides the wood.
Yet, O my palm-tree, be it understood
I will not have my thoughts instead of thee
Who art dearer, better! Rather, instantly
Renew thy presence; as a strong tree should,
Rustle thy boughs and set thy trunk all bare,
And let these bands of greenery which insphere thee,
Drop heavily down,—burst, shattered, everywhere!
Because, in this deep joy to see and hear thee
And breathe within thy shadow a new air,
I do not think of thee—I am too near thee.

XXX.

I SEE thine image through my tears to-night,
And yet to-day I saw thee smiling. How Refer the cause?—Belovëd, is it thou
Or I, who makes me sad? The acolyte
Amid the chanted joy and thankful rite
May so fall flat, with pale insensate brow,
On the altar-stair. I hear thy voice and vow,
Perplexed, uncertain, since thou art out of sight,
As he, in his swooning ears, the choir's amen.
Belovëd, dost thou love? or did I see all
The glory as I dreamed, and fainted when Too vehement light dilated my ideal,
For my soul's eyes? Will that light come again,
As now these tears come—falling hot and real?

XXXI.

THOU comest ! all is said without a word.
I sit beneath thy looks, as children do
In the noon-sun, with souls that tremble through
Their happy eyelids from an unaverred
Yet prodigal inward joy. Behold, I erred
In that last doubt ! and yet I cannot rue
The sin most, but the occasion—that we two
Should for a moment stand unministered
By a mutual presence. Ah, keep near and close,
Thou dovelike help ! and, when my fears would rise,
With thy broad heart serenely interpose :
Brood down with thy divine sufficiencies
These thoughts which tremble when bereft of those,
Like callow birds left desert to the skies.

XXXII.

THE first time that the sun rose on thine oath
To love me, I looked forward to the moon
To slacken all those bonds which seemed too soon
And quickly tied to make a lasting troth.
Quick-loving hearts, I thought, may quickly loathe;
And, looking on myself, I seemed not one
For such man's love!—more like an out of tune
Worn viol, a good singer would be wroth
To spoil his song with, and which, snatched in haste,
Is laid down at the first ill-sounding note.
I did not wrong myself so, but I placed
A wrong on thee. For perfect strains may float
'Neath master-hands, from instruments defaced,—
And great souls, at one stroke, may do and doat.

XXXIII.

YES, call me by my pet-name ! let me hear
The name I used to run at. when a child,
From innocent play, and leave the cowslips piled,
To glance up in some face that proved me dear
With the look of its eyes. I miss the clear
Fond voices which, being drawn and reconciled
Into the music of Heaven's undefiled,
Call me no longer. Silence on the bier,
While I call God—call God !—So let thy mouth
Be heir to those who are now exanimate.
Gather the north flowers to complete the south,
And catch the early love up in the late.
Yes, call me by that name,—and I, in truth,
With the same heart, will answer and not wait.

XXXIV.

WITH the same heart, I said, I'll answer thee
As those, when thou shalt call me by my name—
Lo, the vain promise! is the same, the same,
Perplexed and ruffled by life's strategy?
When called before, I told how hastily
I dropped my flowers or brake off from a game,
To run and answer with the smile that came
At play last moment, and went on with me
Through my obedience. When I answer now,
I drop a grave thought, break from solitude;
Yet still my heart goes to thee—ponder how—
Not as to a single good, but all my good!
Lay thy hand on it, best one, and allow
That no child's foot could run fast as this blood.

XXXV.

IF I leave all for thee, wilt thou exchange
And be all to me? Shall I never miss
Home-talk and blessing and the common kiss
That comes to each in turn, nor count it strange,
When I look up, to drop on a new range
Of walls and floors, another home than this?
Nay, wilt thou fill that place by me which is Filled by dead eyes too tender to know change?
That's hardest. If to conquer love, has tried,
To conquer grief, tries more, as all things prove;
For grief indeed is love and grief beside.
Alas, I have grieved so I am hard to love.
Yet love me—wilt thou? Open thine heart wide,
And fold within the wet wings of thy dove.

XXXVI.

WHEN we met first and loved, I did not build
Upon the event with marble. Could it mean
To last, a love set pendulous between Sorrow and sorrow? Nay, I rather thrilled,
Distrusting every light that seemed to gild
The onward path, and feared to overlean
A finger even. And, though I have grown serene
And strong since then, I think that God has willed
A still renewable fear . . O love, O troth . .
Lest these enclasp'd hands should never hold,
This mutual kiss drop down between us both
As an unowned thing, once the lips being cold.
And Love, be false! if he, to keep one oath,
Must lose one joy, by his life's star foretold.

XXXVII.

PARDON, oh, pardon, that my soul should make.
Of all that strong divineness which I know
For thine and thee, an image only so
Formed of the sand, and fit to shift and break.
It is that distant years which did not take
Thy sovranity, recoiling with a blow,
Have forced my swimming brain to undergo
Their doubt and dread, and blindly to forsake
Thy purity of likeness and distort
Thy worthiest love to a worthless counterfeit :
As if a shipwrecked Pagan, safe in port,
His guardian sea-god to commemorate,
Should set a sculptured porpoise, gills a-snort
And vibrant tail, within the temple-gate.

XXXVIII.

FIRST time he kissed me, he but only kissed
The fingers of this hand wherewith I write ;
And ever since, it grew more clean and white,
Slow to world-greetings, quick with its ' Oh, list,'
When the angels speak. A ring of amethyst
I could not wear here, plainer to my sight,
Than that first kiss. The second passed in height
The first, and sought the forehead, and half missed,
Half falling on the hair. O beyond meed !
That was the chrism of love, which love's own crown,
With sanctifying sweetness, did precede.
The third upon my lips was folded down
In perfect, purple state ; since when, indeed,
I have been proud and said, ' My love, my own.'

XXXIX.

BECAUSE thou hast the power and own'st the grace
To look through and behind this mask of me,
(Against which, years have beat thus blanchingly
With their rains,) and behold my soul's true face,
The dim and weary witness of life's race,—
Because thou hast the faith and love to see,
Through that same soul's distracting lethargy,
The patient angel waiting for a place
In the new Heavens,—because nor sin nor woe,
Nor God's infliction, nor death's neighbourhood,
Nor all which others viewing, turn to go,
Nor all which makes me tired of all, self-viewed,— Nothing repels thee, . . . Dearest, teach me so
To pour out gratitude, as thou dost, good!

XL.

Oh, yes! they love through all this world of ours!
I will not gainsay love, called love forsooth.
I have heard love talked in my early youth,
And since, not so long back but that the flowers
Then gathered, smell still. Mussulmans and Giaours
Throw kerchiefs at a smile, and have no ruth
For any weeping. Polypheme's white tooth
Slips on the nut if, after frequent showers,
The shell is over-smooth,—and not so much
Will turn the thing called love, aside to hate
Or else to oblivion. But thou art not such
A lover, my Belovéd! thou canst wait
Through sorrow and sickness, to bring souls to touch,
And think it soon when others cry 'Too late.'

XLI.

I THANK all who have loved me in their hearts,
With thanks and love from mine. Deep thanks to all
Who paused a little near the prison-wall
To hear my music in its louder parts
Ere they went onward, each one to the mart's
Or temple's occupation, beyond call.
But thou, who, in my voice's sink and fall
When the sob took it, thy divinest Art's
Own instrument didst drop down at thy foot
To harken what I said between my tears, . .
Instruct me how to thank thee ! Oh, to shoot
My soul's full meaning into future years,
That they should lend it utterance, and salute
Love that endures, from Life that disappears !

XLII.

'My future will not copy fair my past'—

I wrote that once ; and thinking at my side

My ministering life-angel justified

The word by his appealing look upcast

To the white throne of God, I turned at last,

And there, instead, saw thee, not unallied

To angels in thy soul ! Then I, long tried

By natural ills, received the comfort fast,

While budding, at thy sight, my pilgrim's staff

Gave out green leaves with morning dews impearled.

I seek no copy now of life's first half :

Leave here the pages with long musing curled,

And write me new my future's epigraph,

New angel mine, un hoped for in the world !

XLIII.

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.
I love thee to the level of everyday's
Most quiet need, by sun and candlelight.
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise.
I love thee with the passion put to use
In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.
I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints,—I love thee with the breath,
Smiles, tears, of all my life!—and, if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death.

XLIV.

BELOVĒD, thou hast brought me many flowers
Plucked in the garden, all the summer through
And winter, and it seemed as if they grew
In this close room, nor missed the sun and showers.
So, in the like name of that love of ours,
Take back these thoughts which here unfolded too,
And which on warm and cold days I withdrew
From my heart's ground. Indeed, those beds and bowers
Be overgrown with bitter weeds and rue,
And wait thy weeding; yet here's eglantine,
Here's ivy!—take them, as I used to do
Thy flowers, and keep them where they shall not pine.
Instruct thine eyes to keep their colours true,
And tell thy soul, their roots are left in mine.

CASA GUIDI WINDOWS.

A Poem,

IN TWO PARTS.

ADVERTISEMENT TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THIS poem contains the impressions of the writer upon events in Tuscany of which she was a witness. 'From a window,' the critic may demur. She bows to the objection in the very title of her work. No continuous narrative nor exposition of political philosophy is attempted by her. It is a simple story of personal impressions, whose only value is in the intensity with which they were received, as proving her warm affection for a beautiful and unfortunate country, and the sincerity with which they are related, as indicating her own good faith and freedom from partisanship.

Of the two parts of this poem, the first was written nearly three years ago, while the second resumes the actual situation of 1851. The discrepancy between the two parts is a sufficient guarantee to the public of the truthfulness of the writer, who, though she certainly escaped the epidemic 'falling sickness' of enthusiasm for Pio Nono, takes shame upon herself that she believed, like a woman, some royal oaths, and lost sight of the probable consequences of some obvious popular defects. If the discrepancy should be painful to the reader, let him understand that to the writer it has been more so. But such discrepancies we are called upon to accept at every hour by the conditions of our nature, implying the interval between aspiration and performance, between faith and dis-illusion, between hope and fact.

‘ O trusted broken prophecy,
O richest fortune sourly crost,
Born for the future, to the future lost ! ’

may, not lost to the future in this case. The future of Italy shall not be disinherited.

FLORENCE, 1851.

CASA GUIDI WINDOWS.

PART I.

I HEARD last night a little child go singing
 'Neath Casa Guidi windows, by the church,
O bella libertà, O bella!—stringing
 'The same words still on notes he went in search
So high for, you concluded the upspringing
 Of such a nimble bird to sky from perch
Must leave the whole bush in a tremble green,
 And that the heart of Italy must beat,
While such a voice had leave to rise serene
 'Twixt church and palace of a Florence street :
A little child, too, who not long had been
 By mother's finger steadied on his feet,
And still O bella libertà he sang.

Then I thought, musing, of the innumerable
 Sweet songs which still for Italy outrang
From older singers' lips who sang not thus Exultingly and purely, yet, with pang
Fast sheathed in music, touched the heart of us

So finely that the pity scarcely pained.
 I thought how Filicaja led on others,
 Bewailers for their Italy enchained,
 And how they called her childless among mothers,
 Widow of empires, ay, and scarce refrained
 Cursing her beauty to her face, as brothers
 Might a shamed sister's,—‘Had she been less fair
 She were less wretched;’—how, evoking so
 From congregated wrong and heaped despair
 Of men and women writhing under blow,
 Harrowed and hideous in a filthy lair,
 Some personating Image wherein woe
 Was wrapt in beauty from offending much,
 They called it Cybele, or Niobe,
 Or laid it corpse-like on a bier for such,
 Where all the world might drop for Italy
 Those cadenced tears which burn not where they touch,—
 ‘Juliet of nations, canst thou die as we?
 And was the violet crown that crowned thy head
 So over-large, though new buds made it rough,
 It slipped down and across thine eyelids dead,
 O sweet, fair Juliet?’ Of such songs enough,
 Too many of such complaints! behold, instead,
 Void at Verona, Juliet’s marble trough :*
 As void as that is, are all images
 Men set between themselves and actual wrong,
 To catch the weight of pity, meet the stress

* They show at Verona, as the tomb of Juliet, an empty trough of stone.

Of conscience,—since 'tis easier to gaze long
On mournful masks and sad effigies
Than on real, live, weak creatures crushed by strong.

For me who stand in Italy to-day
Where worthier poets stood and sang before,
I kiss their footsteps yet their words gainsay.
I can but muse in hope upon this shore
Of golden Arno as it shoots away
Through Florence' heart beneath her bridges four:
Bent bridges, seeming to strain off like bows,
And tremble while the arrowy undertide
Shoots on and cleaves the marble as it goes,
And strikes up palace-walls on either side,
And froths the cornice out in glittering rows,
With doors and windows quaintly multiplied,
And terrace-sweeps, and gazers upon all,
By whom if flower or kerchief were thrown out
From any lattice there, the same would fall
Into the river underneath, no doubt,
It runs so close and fast 'twixt wall and wall.
How beautiful! the mountains from without
In silence listen for the word said next.
What word will men say,—here where Giotto planted
His campanile like an unperplexed
Fine question Heaven-ward, touching the things granted
A noble people who, being greatly vexed
In act, in aspiration keep undaunted?

What word will God say? Michel's Night and Day
And Dawn and Twilight wait in marble scorn*

Like dogs upon a dunghill, couched on clay
From whence the Medicean stamp's outworn,
The final putting off of all such sway

By all such hands, and freeing of the unborn
In Florence and the great world outside Florence.
Three hundred years his patient statues wait

In that small chapel of the dim Saint Lawrence:
Day's eyes are breaking bold and passionate

Over his shoulder, and will flash abhorrence
On darkness and with level looks meet fate,

When once loose from that marble film of theirs;
The Night has wild dreams in her sleep, the Dawn

Is haggard as the sleepless, Twilight wears
A sort of horror; as the veil withdrawn

'Twixt the artist's soul and works had left them heirs
Of speechless thoughts which would not quail nor fawn,
Of angers and contempts, of hope and love:

For not without a meaning did he place

The princely Urbino on the seat above
With everlasting shadow on his face,

While the slow dawns and twilights disapprove
The ashes of his long-extinguished race

Which never more shall clog the feet of men.

* These famous statues recline in the Sagrestia Nuova, on the tombs of Giuliano de' Medici, third son of Lorenzo the Magnificent, and Lorenzo of Urbino, his grandson. Strozzi's epigram on the Night, with Michel Angelo's rejoinder, is well known.

I do believe, divinest Angelo,
That winter-hour in Via Larga, when
They bade thee build a statue up in snow*
And straight that marvel of thine art again
Dissolved beneath the sun's Italian glow,
Thine eyes, dilated with the plastic passion,
Thawing too in drops of wounded manhood, since,
To mock alike thine art and indignation,
Laughed at the palace-window the new prince,— (‘Aha! this genius needs for exaltation,
When all's said and howe'er the proud may wince,
A little marble from our princely mines!’)
I do believe that hour thou laughedst too
For the whole sad world and for thy Florentines,
After those few tears, which were only few!
That as, beneath the sun, the grand white lines
Of thy snow-statue trembled and withdrew,—
The head, erect as Jove's, being palsied first,
The eyelids flattened, the full brow turned blank,
The right-hand, raised but now as if it cursed,
Dropt, a mere snowball, (till the people sank
Their voices, though a louder laughter burst
From the royal window)—thou couldst proudly thank God and the prince for promise and presage,
And laugh the laugh back, I think verily,
Thine eyes being purged by tears of righteous rage
To read a wrong into a prophecy,

* This mocking task was set by Pietro, the unworthy successor of Lorenzo the Magnificent.

And measure a true great man's heritage
Against a mere great-duke's posterity.

I think thy soul said then, 'I do not need
A principedom and its quarries, after all;

For if I write, paint, carve a word, indeed,
On book or board or dust, on floor or wall,

The same is kept of God who taketh heed
That not a letter of the meaning fall

Or ere it touch and teach His world's deep heart,
Outlasting, therefore, all your lordships, sir!

So keep your stone, beseech you, for your part,
To cover up your grave-place and refer

The proper titles; I live by my art.
The thought I threw into this snow shall stir

This gazing people when their gaze is done;
And the tradition of your act and mine,

When all the snow is melted in the sun,
Shall gather up, for unborn men, a sign

Of what is the true principedom,—ay, and none
Shall laugh that day, except the drunk with wine.'

Amen, great Angelo! the day's at hand.
If many laugh not on it, shall we weep?

Much more we must not, let us understand.
Through rhymers sonneteering in their sleep

And archaists mumbling dry bones up the land
And sketchers lauding ruined towns a-heap,—

Through all that drowsy hum of voices smooth,
The hopeful bird mounts carolling from brake,

The hopeful child, with leaps to catch his growth,
Sings open-eyed for liberty's sweet sake :

And I, a singer also from my youth,
Prefer to sing with these who are awake,

With birds, with babes, with men who will not fear
The baptism of the holy morning dew,

(And many of such wakers now are here,
Complete in their anointed manhood, who

Will greatly dare and greatlier persevere,)
Than join those old thin voices with my new,

And sigh for Italy with some safe sigh
Cooped up in music 'twixt an oh and ah,—

Nay, hand in hand with that young child, will I
Go singing rather, 'Bella libertà,'

Than, with those poets, croon the dead or cry
'Se tu men bella fossi, Italia !'

'Less wretched if less fair.' Perhaps a truth
Is so far plain in this, that Italy,

Long trammelled with the purple of her youth
Against her age's ripe activity,

Sits still upon her tombs, without death's ruth
But also without life's brave energy.

'Now tell us what is Italy?' men aske :
And others answer, 'Virgil, Cicero,

Catullus, Cæsar.' What beside? to task
The memory closer—'Why, Boccaccio,

Dante, Petrarca,'—and if still the flask
Appears to yield its wine by drops too slow,—

‘Angelo, Raffael, Pergolese,’—all
Whose strong hearts beat through stone, or charged again

The paints with fire of souls electrical,
Or broke up heaven for music. What more then ?

Why, then, no more. The chaplet’s last beads fall
In naming the last saintship within ken

And, after that, none prayeth in the land.
Alas, this Italy has too long swept

Heroic ashes up for hour-glass sand ;
Of her own past, impassioned nympholept !

Consenting to be nailed here by the hand
To the very bay-tree under which she stept

A queen of old, and plucked a leafy branch ;
And, licensing the world too long indeed

To use her broad phylacteries to staunch
And stop her bloody lips, she takes no heed

How one clear word would draw an avalanche
Of living sons around her, to succeed

The vanished generations. Can she count
These oil-eaters with large live mobile mouths

Agape for maccaroni, in the amount
Of consecrated heroes of her south’s

Bright rosary ? The pitcher at the fount,
The gift of gods, being broken, she much loathes

To let the ground-leaves of the place confer
A natural bowl. So henceforth she would seem

No nation, but the poet’s pensioner,
With alms from every land of song and dream.

We thank you that ye first unlatched the door,
But will not make it inaccessible

By thankings on the threshold any more.
We hurry onward to extinguish hell

With our fresh souls, our younger hope, and God's Maturity of purpose. Soon shall we

Die also ! and, that then our periods
Of life may round themselves to memory

As smoothly as on our graves the burial-sods,
We now must look to it to excel as ye,

And bear our age as far, unlimited
By the last mind-mark ; so, to be invoked
By future generations, as their Dead.

'Tis true that when the dust of death has choked
A great man's voice, the common words he said
Turn oracles, the common thoughts he yoked

Like horses, draw like griffins : this is true
And acceptable. I, too, should desire,

When men make record, with the flowers they strew,
' Savonarola's soul went out in fire

Upon our Grand-duke's piazza,* and burned through
A moment first, or ere he did expire,

The veil betwixt the right and wrong, and showed How near God sate and judged the judges there,—'

* Savonarola was burnt for his testimony against papal corruptions as early as March, 1498 : and, as late as our own day, it has been a custom in Florence to strew with violets the pavement where he suffered, in grateful recognition of the anniversary.

While aye her pipers sadly pipe of her
Until their proper breaths, in that extreme
Of sighing, split the reed on which they played :
Of which, no more. But never say 'no more'
To Italy's life ! Her memories undismayed
Still argue 'evermore ;' her graves implore
Her future to be strong and not afraid ;
Her very statues send their looks before.

We do not serve the dead—the past is past.
God lives, and lifts His glorious mornings up
Before the eyes of men awake at last,
Who put away the meats they used to sup,
And down upon the dust of earth outcast
The dregs remaining of the ancient cup,
Then turn to wakeful prayer and worthy act.
The Dead, upon their awful 'vantage ground,
The sun not in their faces, shall abstract
No more our strength ; we will not be discrowned
As guardians of their crowns, nor deign transact
A barter of the present, for a sound
Of good so counted in the foregone days.
O Dead, ye shall no longer cling to us
With rigid hands of desiccating praise,
And drag us backward by the garment thus,
To stand and laud you in long-drawn virelays !
We will not henceforth be oblivious
Of our own lives, because ye lived before,
Nor of our acts, because ye acted well.

Upon the self-same pavement overstrewn
To cast my violets with as reverent care,
And prove that all the winters which have snowed
Cannot snow out the scent from stones and air,
Of a sincere man's virtues. This was he,
Savonarola, who, while Peter sank
With his whole boat-load, called courageously
'Wake Christ, wake Christ!'—who, having tried the tank
Of old church-waters used for baptistry
Ere Luther came to spill them, swore they stank;
Who also by a princely deathbed cried,
'Loose Florence, or God will not loose thy soul!'
Then fell back the Magnificent and died
Beneath the star-look shooting from the cowl,
Which turned to wormwood-bitterness the wide
Deep sea of his ambitions. It were foul
To grudge Savonarola and the rest
Their violets: rather pay them quick and fresh!
The emphasis of death makes manifest
The eloquence of action in our flesh;
And men who, living, were but dimly guessed,
When once free from their life's entangled mesh,
Show their full length in graves, or oft indeed
Exaggerate their stature, in the flat,
To noble admirations which exceed
Most nobly, yet will calculate in that
But accurately. We, who are the seed
Of buried creatures, if we turned and spat

Upon our antecedents, we were vile.
Bring violets rather. If these had not walked
Their furlong, could we hope to walk our mile?
Therefore bring violets. Yet if we self-baulked
Stand still, a-strewing violets all the while,
These moved in vain, of whom we have vainly talked.
So rise up henceforth with a cheerful smile,
And having strewn the violets, reap the corn,
And having reaped and garnered, bring the plough
And draw new furrows 'neath the healthy morn,
And plant the great Hereafter in this Now.

Of old 'twas so. How step by step was worn,
As each man gained on each securely!—how
Each by his own strength sought his own Ideal,—
The ultimate Perfection leaning bright
From out the sun and stars to bless the leal
And earnest search of all for Fair and Right
Through doubtful forms by earth accounted real!
Because old Jubal blew into delight
The souls of men with clear-piped melodies,
If youthful Asaph were content at most
To draw from Jubal's grave, with listening eyes,
Traditionary music's floating ghost
Into the grass-grown silence, were it wise?
And was't not wiser, Jubal's breath being lost,
That Miriam clashed her cymbals to surprise
The sun between her white arms flung apart,
With new glad golden sounds? that David's strings

O'erflowed his hand with music from his heart?
So harmony grows full from many springs,
And happy accident turns holy art.

You enter, in your Florence wanderings,
The church of Saint Maria Novella. Pass
The left stair, where at plague-time Machiavel*
Saw One with set fair face as in a glass,
Dressed out against the fear of death and hell,
Rustling her silks in pauses of the mass,
To keep the thought off how her husband fell,
When she left home, stark dead across her feet,—
The stair leads up to what the Orgagnas save
Of Dante's dæmons; you, in passing it,
Ascend the right stair from the farther nave
To muse in a small chapel scarcely lit
By Cimabue's Virgin. Bright and brave,
That picture was accounted, mark, of old:
A king stood bare before its sovran grace,†
A reverent people shouted to behold
The picture, not the king, and even the place
Containing such a miracle grew bold,
Named the Glad Borgo from that beauteous face

* See his description of the plague in Florence.

† Charles of Anjou, in his passage through Florence, was permitted to see this picture while yet in Cimabue's 'bottega.' The populace followed the royal visitor, and, from the universal delight and admiration, the quarter of the city in which the artist lived was called 'Borgo Allegri.' The picture was carried in triumph to the church, and deposited there.

Which thrilled the artist, after work, to think
His own ideal Mary-smile should stand

So very near him,—he, within the brink
Of all that glory, let in by his hand

With too divine a rashness ! Yet none shrink
Who come to gaze here now ; albeit 'twas planned
Sublimely in the thought's simplicity :

The Lady, throned in empyreal state,

Minds only the young Babe upon her knee,
While sidelong angels bear the royal weight,

Prostrated meekly, smiling tenderly
Oblivion of their wings ; the Child thereat

Stretching its hand like God. If any should,
Because of some stiff draperies and loose joints,

Gaze scorn down from the heights of Raffaelhood
On Cimabue's picture,—Heaven anoints

The head of no such critic, and his blood
The poet's curse strikes full on and appoints

To ague and cold spasms for evermore.
A noble picture ! worthy of the shout

Wherewith along the streets the people bore
Its cherub-faces which the sun threw out

Until they stooped and entered the church door.
Yet rightly was young Giotto talked about,

Whom Cimabue found among the sheep,*

* How Cimabue found Giotto, the shepherd-boy, sketching a ram of his flock upon a stone, is prettily told by Vasari,—who also relates that the elder artist Margheritone died 'infastidito' of the successes of the new school.

And knew, as gods know gods, and carried home
To paint the things he had painted, with a deep
And fuller insight, and so overcome

His chapel-Lady with a heavenlier sweep
Of light : for thus we mount into the sum

Of great things known or acted. I hold, too,
That Cimabue smiled upon the lad

At the first stroke which passed what he could do,
Or else his Virgin's smile had never had

Such sweetness in 't. All great men who foreknew
Their heirs in art, for art's sake have been glad,

And bent their old white heads as if uncrowned,
Fanatics of their pure Ideals still

Far more than of their triumphs, which were found
With some less vehement struggle of the will.

If old Margheritone trembled, swooned
And died despairing at the open sill

Of other men's achievements, (who achieved,
By loving art beyond the master) he

Was old Margheritone, and conceived
Never, at first youth and most ecstasy,

A Virgin like that dream of one, which heaved
The death-sigh from his heart. If wistfully

Margheritone sickened at the smell
Of Cimabue's laurel, let him go !

For Cimabue stood up very well
In spite of Giotto's, and Angelico

The artist-saint kept smiling in his cell
The smile with which he welcomed the sweet slow

Inbreak of angels, (whitening through the dim
That he might paint them) while the sudden sense
Of Raffael's future was revealed to him
By force of his own fair works' competence.

The same blue waters where the dolphins swim
Suggest the tritons. Through the blue Immense
Strike out, all swimmers! cling not in the way
Of one another, so to sink; but learn

The strongman's impulse, catch the freshening spray
He throws up in his motions, and discern

By his clear westering eye, the time of day.
Thou, God, hast set us worthy gifts to earn

Besides Thy heaven and Thee! and when I say
There's room here for the weakest man alive
To live and die, there's room too, I repeat,
For all the strongest to live well, and strive

Their own way, by their individual heat,—
Like some new bee-swarm leaving the old hive,
Despite the wax which tempts so violet-sweet.

Then let the living live, the dead retain

Their grave-cold flowers!—though honour's best supplied

By bringing actions, to prove theirs not vain.

Cold graves, we say? it shall be testified
That living men who burn in heart and brain,

Without the dead were colder. If we tried
To sink the past beneath our feet, be sure

The future would not stand. Precipitate

This old roof from the shrine, and, insecure,

The nesting swallows fly off, mate from mate.

How scant the gardens, if the graves were fewer!

The tall green poplars grew no longer straight

Whose tops not looked to Troy. Would any fight

For Athens, and not swear by Marathon?

Who dared build temples, without tombs in sight?

Or live, without some dead man's benison?

Or seek truth, hope for good, and strive for right,

If, looking up, he saw not in the sun

Some angel of the martyrs all day long

Standing and waiting? Your last rhythm will need

Your earliest key-note. Could I sing this song,

If my dead masters had not taken heed

To help the heavens and earth to make me strong,

As the wind ever will find out some reed

And touch it to such issues as belong

To such a frail thing? None may grudge the Dead,

Libations from full cups. Unless we choose

To look back to the hills behind us spread,

The plains before us sadden and confuse;

If orphaned, we are disinherited.

I would but turn these lachrymals to use,

And pour fresh oil in from the olive-grove,

To furnish them as new lamps. Shall I say

What made my heart beat with exulting love

A few weeks back?—

The day was such a day

As Florence owes the sun. The sky above,
Its weight upon the mountains seemed to lay,
And palpitate in glory, like a dove
Who has flown too fast, full-hearted—take away
The image! for the heart of man beat higher
That day in Florence, flooding all her streets
And piazzas with a tumult and desire.
The people, with accumulated heats
And faces turned one way, as if one fire
Both drew and flushed them, left their ancient beats
And went up toward the palace-Pitti wall
To thank their Grand-duke who, not quite of course,
Had graciously permitted, at their call,
The citizens to use their civic force
To guard their civic homes. So, one and all,
The Tuscan cities streamed up to the source
Of this new good at Florence, taking it
As good so far, presageful of more good,—
The first torch of Italian freedom, lit
To toss in the next tiger's face who should Approach too near them in a greedy fit,—
The first pulse of an even flow of blood
To prove the level of Italian veins
Towards rights perceived and granted. How we gazed
From Casa Guidi windows while, in trains
Of orderly procession—banners raised,
And intermittent bursts of martial strains
Which died upon the shout, as if amazed
By gladness beyond music—they passed on!

The Magistracy, with insignia, passed,—

And all the people shouted in the sun,
And all the thousand windows which had cast
A ripple of silks in blue and scarlet down,
(As if the houses overflowed at last,)

Seemed growing larger with fair heads and eyes.

The Lawyers passed,—and still arose the shout,

And hands broke from the windows to surprise
Those grave calm brows with bay-tree leavesthrown out.

The Priesthood passed,—the friars with worldly-wise
Keen sidelong glances from their beards about

The street to see who shouted; many a monk
Who takes a long rope in the waist, was there:

Whereat the popular exultation drunk

With indrawn 'vivas' the whole sunny air,

While through the murmuring windows rose and sunk

A cloud of kerchiefed hands,—'The church makes fair

Her welcome in the new Pope's name.' Ensued
The black sign of the 'Martyrs'—(name no name,

But count the graves in silence.) Next were viewed
The Artists; next, the Trades; and after came

The People,—flag and sign, and rights as good—
And very loud the shout was for that same

Motto, 'Il popolo.' IL POPOLO,—

The word means dukedom, empire, majesty,

And kings in such an hour might read it so.
And next, with banners, each in his degree,

Deputed representatives a-row
Of every separate state of Tuscany:

Siena's she-wolf, bristling on the fold
Of the first flag, preceded Pisa's hare,
And Massa's lion floated calm in gold,
Pienza's following with his silver stare,
Arezzo's steed pranced clear from bridle-hold,—
And well might shout our Florence, greeting there
These, and more brethren. Last, the world had sent
The various children of her teeming flanks—
Greeks, English, French—as if to a parliament
Of lovers of her Italy in ranks,
Each bearing its land's symbol reverent;
At which the stones seemed breaking into thanks
And rattling up the sky, such sounds in proof
Arose; the very house-walls seemed to bend;
The very windows, up from door to roof,
Flashed out a rapture of bright heads, to mend
With passionate looks the gesture's whirling off
A hurricane of leaves. Three hours did end
While all these passed; and ever in the crowd,
Rude men, unconscious of the tears that kept
Their beards moist, shouted; some few laughed aloud,
And none asked any why they laughed and wept:
Friends kissed each other's cheeks, and foes long vowed
More warmly did it; two-months babies leapt
Right upward in their mother's arms, whose black
Wide glittering eyes looked elsewhere; lovers pressed
Each before either, neither glancing back;
And peasant maidens smoothly 'tired and tressed
Forgot to finger on their throats the slack

Great pearl-strings; while old blind men would not rest,

But pattered with their staves and slid their shoes
Along the stones, and smiled as if they saw.

O heaven, I think that day had noble use
Among God's days! So near stood Right and Law,

Both mutually forborne! Law would not bruise,
Nor Right deny, and each in reverent awe

Honoured the other. And if, ne'ertheless,
That good day's sun delivered to the vines

No charta, and the liberal Duke's excess
Did scarce exceed a Guelf's or Ghibelline's

In any special actual righteousness
Of what that day he granted, still the signs

Are good and full of promise, we must say,
When multitudes approach their kings with prayers

And kings concede their people's right to pray
Both in one sunshine. Griefs are not despairs,

So uttered, nor can royal claims dismay
When men from humble homes and ducal chairs,

Hate wrong together. It was well to view
Those banners ruffled in a ruler's face

Inscribed, 'Live freedom, union, and all true
Brave patriots who are aided by God's grace!'

Nor was it ill when Leopoldo drew
His little children to the window-place

He stood in at the Pitti, to suggest
They too should govern as the people willed.

What a cry rose then! some, who saw the best,
Declared his eyes filled up and overfilled

With good warm human tears which unrepressed
Ran down. I like his face; the forehead's build
Has no capacious genius, yet perhaps
Sufficient comprehension,—mild and sad,
And careful nobly,—not with care that wraps
Self-loving hearts, to stifle and make mad,
But careful with the care that shuns a lapse
Of faith and duty, studious not to add
A burden in the gathering of a gain.
And so, God save the Duke, I say with those
Who that day shouted it; and while dukes reign,
May all wear in the visible overflows
Of spirit, such a look of careful pain!
For God must love it better than repose.

And all the people who went up to let
Their hearts out to that Duke, as has been told—
Where guess ye that the living people met,
Kept tryst, formed ranks, chose leaders, first unrolled
Their banners?

In the Loggia? where is set
Cellini's godlike Perseus, bronze or gold,
(How name the metal, when the statue flings
Its soul so in your eyes?) with brow and sword
Superbly calm, as all opposing things,
Slain with the Gorgon, were no more abhorred
Since ended?

No, the people sought no wings
From Perseus in the Loggia, nor implored

An inspiration in the place beside
From that dim bust of Brutus, jagged and grand,
Where Buonarroti passionately tried
From out the close-clenched marble to demand
The head of Rome's sublimest homicide,
Then dropt the quivering mallet from his hand,
Despairing he could find no model-stuff
Of Brutus in all Florence where he found
The gods and gladiators thick enough.
Nor there! the people chose still holier ground:
The people, who are simple blind and rough,
Know their own angels, after looking round.
Whom chose they then? where met they?

On the stone

Called Dante's,—a plain flat stone scarce discerned
From others in the pavement,—whereupon
He used to bring his quiet chair out, turned
To Brunelleschi's church, and pour alone
The lava of his spirit when it burned:
It is not cold to-day. O passionate
Poor Dante who, a banished Florentine,
Didst sit austere at banquets of the great
And muse upon this far-off stone of thine
And think how oft some passer used to wait
A moment, in the golden day's decline,
With 'Good night, dearest Dante!'—well, good night!
I muse now, Dante, and think verily,
Though chapelled in the byeway out of sight,

Ravenna's bones would thrill with ecstasy,
 Couldst know thy favourite stone's elected right
 As tryst-place for thy Tuscans to foresee
 Their earliest chartas from. Good night, good morn,
 Henceforward, Dante ! now my soul is sure
 That thine is better comforted of scorn,
 And looks down earthward in completer cure
 Than when, in Santa Croce church forlorn
 Of any corpse, the architect and hewer
 Did pile the empty marbles as thy tomb.*
 For now thou art no longer exiled, now
 Best honoured : we salute thee who art come
 Back to the old stone with a softer brow
 Than Giotto drew upon the wall, for some Good lovers of our age to track and plough†
 Their way to, through time's ordures stratified,
 And startle broad awake into the dull
 Bargello chamber : now thou'rt milder-eyed,—
 Now Beatrix may leap up glad to cull
 Thy first smile, even in heaven and at her side,
 Like that which, nine years old, looked beautiful
 At May-game. What do I say ? I only meant
 That tender Dante loved his Florence well,
 While Florence, now, to love him is content ;

* The Florentines, to whom the Ravennese refused the body of Dante, (demanded of them 'in a late remorse of love') have given a cenotaph in this church to their divine poet. Something less than a grave !

† In allusion to Mr. Kirkup's discovery of Giotto's fresco portrait of Dante.

And, mark ye, that the piercingest sweet smell
Of love's dear incense by the living sent
To find the dead, is not accessible
To lazy livers—no narcotic,—not
Swung in a censer to a sleepy tune,—
But trod out in the morning air by hot
Quick spirits who tread firm to ends foreshown,
And use the name of greatness unforgot,
To meditate what greatness may be done.

For Dante sits in heaven and ye stand here,
And more remains for doing, all must feel,
Than trysting on his stone from year to year
To shift processions, civic toe to heel,
The town's thanks to the Pitti. Are ye freer
For what was felt that day? a chariot-wheel
May spin fast, yet the chariot never roll.
But if that day suggested something good,
And bettered, with one purpose, soul by soul,—
Better means freer. A land's brotherhood
Is most puissant : men, upon the whole,
Are what they can be,—nations, what they would.

Will therefore, to be strong, thou Italy !
Will to be noble ! Austrian Metternich
Can fix no yoke unless the neck agree ;
And thine is like the lion's when the thick
Dews shudder from it, and no man would be
The stroker of his mane, much less would prick

His nostril with a reed. When nations roar
Like lions, who shall tame them and defraud
Of the due pasture by the river-shore?
Roar, therefore! shake your dew-laps dry abroad:
The amphitheatre with open door
Leads back upon the benches who applaud
The last spear-thruster.

Yet the Heavens forbid
That we should call on passion to confront
The brutal with the brutal and, amid
This ripening world, suggest a lion-hunt
And lion's-vengeance for the wrongs men did
And do now, though the spears are getting blunt.
We only call, because the sight and proof
Of lion-strength hurts nothing; and to show
A lion-heart, and measure paw with hoof,
Helps something, even, and will instruct a foe
As well as the onslaught, how to stand aloof:
Or else the world gets past the mere brute blow
Or given or taken. Children use the fist
Until they are of age to use the brain;
And so we needed Cæsars to assist
Man's justice, and Napoleons to explain
God's counsel, when a point was nearly missed,
Until our generations should attain
Christ's stature nearer. Not that we, alas,
Attain already; but a single inch
Will raise to look down on the swordsman's pass.

As knightly Roland on the coward's flinch :
And, after choloroform and ether-gas,

We find out slowly what the bee and finch
Have ready found, through Nature's lamp in each,

How to our races we may justify
Our individual claims and, as we reach

Our own grapes, bend the top vines to supply
The children's uses,—how to fill a breach

With olive-branches,—how to quench a lie
With truth, and smite a foe upon the cheek

With Christ's most conquering kiss. Why, these are things

Worth a great nation's finding, to prove weak

The 'glorious arms' of military kings.

And so with wide embrace, my England, seek

To stifle the bad heat and flickerings
Of this world's false and nearly expended fire !

Draw palpitating arrows to the wood,
And twang abroad thy high hopes and thy higher

Resolves, from that most virtuous altitude !
Till nations shall unconsciously aspire

By looking up to thee, and learn that good
And glory are not different. Announce law

By freedom ; exalt chivalry by peace ;
Instruct how clear calm eyes can overawe,

And how pure hands, stretched simply to release
A bond-slave, will not need a sword to draw

To be held dreadful. O my England, crease
Thy purple with no alien agonies

No struggles toward encroachment, no vile war!
Disband thy captains, change thy victories,
Be henceforth prosperous as the angels are,
Helping, not humbling.

Drums and battle-cries

Go out in music of the morning-star—
And soon we shall have thinkers in the place
Of fighters, each found able as a man
To strike electric influence through a race,
Unstayed by city-wall and barbican.
The poet shall look grander in the face
Than even of old, (when he of Greece began
To sing 'that Achillean wrath which slew
So many heroes,')—seeing he shall treat
The deeds of souls heroic toward the true,
The oracles of life, previsions sweet
And awful like divine swans gliding through
White arms of Ledas, which will leave the heat
Of their escaping godship to endue
The human medium with a heavenly flush.

Meanwhile, in this same Italy we want
Not popular passion, to arise and crush,
But popular conscience, which may covenant
For what it knows. Concede without a blush,
To grant the 'civic guard' is not to grant
The civic spirit, living and awake:
Those lappets on your shoulders citizens,

Your eyes strain after sideways till they ache,
(While still, in admirations and amens,
The crowd comes up on festa-days to take
The great sight in)—are not intelligence,
Not courage even—alas, if not the sign
Of something very noble, they are nought;
For every day ye dress your sallow kine
With fringes down their cheeks, though unbesought
They loll their heavy heads and drag the wine
And bear the wooden yoke as they were taught
The first day. What ye want is light—indeed
Not sunlight—(ye may well look up surprised
To those unfathomable heavens that feed
Your purple hills)—but God's light organized
In some high soul, crowned capable to lead
The conscious people, conscious and advised,—
For if we lift a people like mere clay,
It falls the same. We want thee, O unfound
And sovran teacher! if thy beard be grey
Or black, we bid thee rise up from the ground
And speak the word God giveth thee to say,
Inspiring into all this people round,
Instead of passion, thought, which pioneers
All generous passion, purifies from sin,
And strikes the hour for. Rise up, teacher! here's
A crowd to make a nation!—best begin
By making each a man, till all be peers
Of earth's true patriots and pure martyrs in Knowing and daring. Best unbar the doors

Which Peter's heirs keep locked so overclose
 They only let the mice across the floors,
 While every churchman dangles, as he goes,
 The great key at his girdle, and abhors
 In Christ's name, meekly. Open wide the house,
 Concede the entrance with Christ's liberal mind,
 And set the tables with His wine and bread.

What! 'commune in both kinds?' In every kind—
 Wine, wafer, love, hope, truth, unlimited,
 Nothing kept back. For when a man is blind
 To starlight, will he see the rose is red?
 A bondsman shivering at a Jesuit's foot—
 'Væ! meâ culpâ!'—is not like to stand
 A freedman at a despot's and dispute
 His titles by the balance in his hand,
 Weighing them 'suo jure.' Tend the root
 If careful of the branches, and expand
 The inner souls of men before you strive
 For civic heroes.

But the teacher, where?
 From all these crowded faces, all alive,
 Eyes, of their own lids flashing themselves bare,
 And brows that with a mobile life contrive
 A deeper shadow,—may we in no wise dare
 To put a finger out and touch a man,
 And cry 'this is the leader'? What, all these!
 Broad heads, black eyes,—yet not a soul that ran
 From God down with a message? all, to please

The donna waving measures with her fan,
And not the judgment-angel on his knees,
(The trumpet just an inch off from his lips)
Who when he breathes next, will put out the sun?

Yet mankind's self were foundered in eclipse,
If lacking doers, with great works to be done;
And lo, the startled earth already dips
Back into light; a better day's begun;
And soon this leader, teacher, will stand plain,
And build the golden pipes and synthesize
This people-organ for a holy strain.
We hold this hope, and still in all these eyes,
Go sounding for the deep look which shall drain
Suffused thought into channelled enterprise.

Where is the teacher? What now may he do,
Who shall do greatly? Doth he gird his waist
With a monk's rope, like Luther? or pursue
The goat, like Tell? or dry his nets in haste,
Like Masaniello when the sky was blue?

Keep house, like other peasants, with inlaced
Bare brawny arms about a favourite child,
And meditative looks beyond the door,

(But not to mark the kidling's teeth have filed
The green shoots of his vine which last year bore
Full twenty bunches,) or, on triple-piled
Throne-velvets sit at ease to bless the poor,

Like other pontiffs, in the Poorest's name?
The old tiara keeps itself aslope

Upon his steady brows which, all the same,
Bend mildly to permit the people's hope?

Whatever hand shall grasp this oriflamme,
Whatever man (last peasant or first pope
Seeking to free his country) shall appear,
Teach, lead, strike fire into the masses, fill
These empty bladders with fine air, insphere
These wills into a unity of will,
And make of Italy a nation—dear
And blessed be that man! the Heavens shall kill
No leaf the earth lets grow for him, and Death
Shall cast him back upon the lap of Life
To live more surely, in a clarion-breath
Of hero-music. Brutus with the knife,
Rienzi with the fasces, throb beneath
Rome's stones,—and more who threw away joy's fife

Like Pallas, that the beauty of their souls
Might ever shine untroubled and entire:
But if it can be true that he who rolls
The Church's thunders, will reserve her fire
For only light,—from eucharistic bowls
Will pour new life for nations that expire,
And rend the scarlet of his papal vest
To gird the weak loins of his countrymen,—
I hold that he surpasses all the rest
Of Romans, heroes, patriots; and that when
He sat down on the throne, he dispossessed

The first graves of some glory. See again,

This country-saving is a glorious thing:
And if a common man achieved it? well.

Say, a rich man did? excellent. A king?
That grows sublime. A priest? improbable.

A pope? Ah, there we stop, and cannot bring
Our faith up to the leap, with history's bell

So heavy round the neck of it—albeit
We fain would grant the possibility

For thy sake, Pio Nono!

Stretch thy feet

In that case—I will kiss them reverently

As any pilgrim to the papal seat:

And, such proved possible, thy throne to me

Shall seem as holy a place as Pellico's
Venetian dungeon, or as Spielberg's grate

At which the Lombard woman hung the rose
Of her sweet soul by its own dewy weight,

To feel the dungeon round her sunshine close,
And pining so, died early, yet too late

For what she suffered. Yea, I will not choose
Betwixt thy throne, Pope Pius, and the spot

Marked red for ever, spite of rains and dews,
Where Two fell riddled by the Austrian's shot,

The brothers Bandiera, who accuse,
With one same mother-voice and face (that what

They speak may be invincible) the sins
Of earth's tormentors before God the just,

Until the unconscious thunder-bolt begins
To loosen in His grasp.

And yet we must
Beware, and mark the natural kiths and kins
Of circumstance and office, and distrust
The rich man reasoning in a poor man's hut,
The poet who neglects pure truth to prove Statistic fact, the child who leaves a rut
For a smoother road, the priest who vows his glove
Exhales no grace, the prince who walks afoot,
The woman who has sworn she will not love,
And this Ninth Pius in Seventh Gregory's chair,
With Andrea Doria's forehead!

Count what goes
To making up a pope, before he wear
That triple crown. We pass the world-wide throes
Which went to make the popedom,—the despair
Of free men, good men, wise men; the dread shows
• Of women's faces, by the faggot's flash
Tossed out, to the minutest stir and throb
O' the white lips, the least tremble of a lash,
To glut the red stare of a licensed mob;
The short mad cries down oubliettes, and plash
So horribly far off; priests, trained to rob,
And kings that, like encouraged nightmares, sate
On nations' hearts most heavily distressed
With monstrous sights and apophthegms of fate—

We pass these things,—because ‘the times’ are prest

With necessary charges of the weight
Of all this sin, and ‘Calvin, for the rest,

Made bold to burn Servetus. Ah, men err!’—
And so do churches! which is all we mean

To bring to proof in any register
Of theological fat kine and lean:

So drive them back into the pens! refer
Old sins (with pourpoint, ‘quotha’ and ‘I ween,’)

Entirely to the old times, the old times;
Nor ever ask why this preponderant

Infallible pure Church could set her chimes
Most loudly then, just then,—most jubilant,

Precisely then, when mankind stood in crimes
Fullheart-deep, and Heaven’s judgments were not scant.

Inquire still less, what signifies a church
Of perfect inspiration and pure laws

Who burns the first man with a brimstone-torch,
And grinds the second, bone by bone, because

The times, forsooth, are used to rack and scorch!
What is a holy Church unless she awes

The times down from their sins? Did Christ select Such amiable times, to come and teach

Love to, and mercy? The whole world were wrecked
If every mere great man, who lives to reach

A little leaf of popular respect,
Attained not simply by some special breach

In the age’s customs, by some precedence
In thought and act, which, having proved him higher

Than those he lived with, proved his competence
In helping them to wonder and aspire.

My words are guiltless of the bigot's sense.
My soul has fire to mingle with the fire
Of all these souls, within or out of doors
Of Rome's church or another. I believe
In one Priest, and one temple with its floors
Of shining jasper gloom'd at morn and eve
By countless knees of earnest auditors,
And crystal walls too lucid to perceive,
That none may take the measure of the place
And say, 'So far the porphyry, then, the flint—
To this mark mercy goes, and there ends grace,'
Though still the permeable crystals hint
At some white starry distance, bathed in space.
I feel how nature's ice-crusts keep the dint
Of undersprings of silent Deity.
I hold the articulated gospels which
Show Christ among us crucified on tree.
I love all who love truth, if poor or rich
In what they have won of truth possessively.
No altars and no hands defiled with pitch
Shall scare me off, but I will pray and eat
With all these—taking leave to choose my ewers—
And say at last, 'Your visible churches cheat
Their inward types; and, if a church assures
Of standing without failure and defeat,
The same both fails and lies.'

To leave which lures
Of wider subject through past years,—behold,
We come back from the popedom to the pope,
To ponder what he must be, ere we are bold
For what he may be, with our heavy hope
To trust upon his soul. So, fold by fold,
Explore this mummy in the priestly cope,
Transmitted through the darks of time, to catch
The man within the wrappage, and discern
How he, an honest man, upon the watch
Full fifty years for what a man may learn,
Contrived to get just there ; with what a snatch
Of old-world oboli he had to earn
The passage through ; with what a drowsy sop,
To drench the busy barkings of his brain ;
What ghosts of pale tradition, wreathed with hop
'Gainst wakeful thought, he had to entertain
For heavenly visions ; and consent to stop
The clock at noon, and let the hour remain
(Without vain windings-up) inviolate
Against all chimings from the belfry. Lo,
From every given pope you must abate,
Albeit you love him, some things—good, you know—
Which every given heretic you hate,
Assumes for his, as being plainly so.
A pope must hold by popes a little,—yes,
By councils, from Nicæa up to Trent,—
By hierocratic empire, more or less
Irresponsible to men,—he must resent

Each man's particular conscience, and repress
Inquiry, meditation, argument,

As tyrants faction. Also, he must not Love truth too dangerously, but prefer

'The interests of the Church,' (because a blot
Is better than a rent, in miniver)—

Submit to see the people swallow hot
Husk-porridge, which his chartered churchmen stir

Quoting the only true God's epigraph,
'Feed my lamps, Peter!'—must consent to sit

Attesting with his pastoral ring and staff
To such a picture of our Lady, hit

Off well by artist-angels, (though not half
As fair as Giotto would have painted it)—

To such a vial, where a dead man's blood
Runs yearly warm beneath a churchman's finger,—

To such a holy house of stone and wood,
Whereof a cloud of angels was the bringer

From Bethlehem to Loreto. Were it good
For any pope on earth to be a flinger

Of stones against these high-niched counterfeits?
Apostates only are iconoclasts.

He dares not say, while this false thing abets
That true thing, 'this is false.' He keeps his fasts

And prayers, as prayer and fast were silver frets
To change a note upon a string that lasts,

And make a lie a virtue. Now, if he Did more than this, higher hoped, and braver dared,

I think he were a pope in jeopardy,
Or no pope rather, for his truth had barred
The vaulting of his life,—and certainly,
If he do only this, mankind's regard

Moves on from him at once, to seek some new Teacher and leader. He is good and great

According to the deeds a pope can do ;
Most liberal, save those bonds ; affectionate,

As princes may be, and, as priests are, true ;
But only the ninth Pius after eight,

When all's praised most. At best and hopefullest,
He's pope—we want a man ! his heart beats warm,

But, like the prince enchanted to the waist,
He sits in stone and hardens by a charm

Into the marble of his throne high-placed.
Mild benediction waves his saintly arm—

So, good ! but what we want's a perfect man,
Complete and all alive : half travertine

Half suits our need, and ill subserves our plan.
Feet, knees, nerves, sinews, energies divine

Were never yet too much for men who ran
In such hard ways as must be this of thine,

Deliverer whom we seek, whoe'er thou art,
Pope, prince, or peasant ! If, indeed, the first,

The noblest, therefore ! since the heroic heart
Within thee must be great enough to burst

Those trammels buckling to the baser part
Thy saintly peers in Rome, who crossed and cursed
With the same finger.

Come, appear, be found,
If pope or peasant, come! we hear the cock,
The courtier of the mountains when first crowned
With golden dawn; and orient glories flock
To meet the sun upon the highest ground.
Take voice and work! we wait to hear thee knock
At some one of our Florentine nine gates,
On each of which was imaged a sublime
Face of a Tuscan genius, which, for hate's
And love's sake, both, our Florence in her prime Turned boldly on all comers to her states,
As heroes turned their shields in antique time
Emblazoned with honourable acts. And though
The gates are blank now of such images,
And Petrarch looks no more from Nicolo
Toward dear Arezzo, 'twixt the acacia-trees,
Nor Dante, from gate Gallo—still we know,
Despite the razing of the blazonries,
Remains the consecration of the shield:
The dead heroic faces will start out
On all these gates, if foes should take the field,
And blend sublimely, at the earliest shout,
With living heroes who will scorn to yield
A hair's-breadth even, when, gazing round about,
They find in what a glorious company
They fight the foes of Florence. Who will grudge
His one poor life, when that great man we see
Has given five hundred years, the world being judge
To help the glory of his Italy?

Who, born the fair side of the Alps, will budge,
When Dante stays, when Ariosto stays,
When Petrarch stays for ever? Ye bring swords,
My Tuscans? Ay, if wanted in this haze,
Bring swords: but first bring souls!—bring thoughts
and words,

Unruled by a tear of yesterday's
Yet awful by its wrong,—and cut these cords,
And mow this green lush falseness to the roots,
And shut the mouth of hell below the swathe!
And, if ye can bring songs too, let the lute's
Recoverable music softly bathe
Some poet's hand, that, through all bursts and bruits
Of popular passion, all unripe and rathe
Convictions of the popular intellect,
Ye may not lack a finger up the air,
Annunciative, reproofing, pure, erect,
To show which way your first Ideal bare
The whiteness of its wings when (sorely pecked
By falcons on your wrists) it unaware Arose up overhead and out of sight.

Meanwhile, let all the far ends of the world
Breathe back the deep breath of their old delight,
To swell the Italian banner just unfurled.

Help, lands of Europe! for, if Austria fight,
The drums will bar your slumber. Had ye curled
The laurel for your thousand artists' brows,
If these Italian hands had planted none?

Can any sit down idle in the house
Nor hear appeals from Buonarroti's stone
And Raffael's canvas, rousing and to rouse?
Where's Poussin's master? Gallic Avignon
Bred Laura, and Vaucluse's fount has stirred
The heart of France too strongly, as it lets
Its little stream out, (like a wizard's bird
Which bounds upon its emerald wing and wets
The rocks on each side) that she should not gird
Her loins with Charlemagne's sword when foes beset
The country of her Petrarch. Spain may well
Be minded how from Italy she caught,
To mingle with her tinkling Moorish bell,
A fuller cadence and a subtler thought.
And even the New World, the receptacle
Of freemen, may send glad men, as it ought,
To greet Vespucci Amerigo's door.
While England claims, by trump of poetry,
Verona, Venice, the Ravenna-shore,
And dearer holds John Milton's Fiesole
Than Langlande's Malvern with the stars in flower.

And Vallombrosa, we two went to see
Last June, beloved companion,—where sublime
The mountains live in holy families,
And the slow pinewoods ever climb and climb
Half up their breasts, just stagger as they seize
Some grey crag, drop back with it many a time,
And straggle blindly down the precipice.

The Vallombrosan brooks were strewn as thick
That June-day, knee-deep with dead beechen leaves,
As Milton saw them ere his heart grew sick
And his eyes blind. I think the monks and beeves
Are all the same too: scarce have they changed the wick

On good St. Gualbert's altar which receives
The convent's pilgrims; and the pool in front
(Wherein the hill-stream trout are cast, to wait
The beatific vision and the grunt
Used at refectory) keeps its weedy state,
To baffle saintly abbots who would count
The fish across their breviary nor 'bate
The measure of their steps. O waterfalls
And forests! sound and silence! mountains bare
That leap up peak by peak and catch the palls
Of purple and silver mist to rend and share
With one another, at electric calls
Of life in the sunbeams,—till we cannot dare
Fix your shapes, count your number! we must think

Your beauty and your glory helped to fill
The cup of Milton's soul so to the brink,
He never more was thirsty when God's will
Had shattered to his sense the last chain-link
By which he had drawn from Nature's visible
The fresh well-water. Satisfied by this,
He sang of Adam's paradise and smiled,
Remembering Vallombrosa. Therefore is

The place divine to English man and child,
And pilgrims leave their souls here in a kiss.

For Italy's the whole earth's treasury, piled
With reveries of gentle ladies, flung
Aside, like ravelled silk, from life's worn stuff;
With coins of scholars' fancy, which, being rung
On work-day counter, still sound silver-proof;
In short, with all the dreams of dreamers young,
Before their heads have time for slipping off
* Hope's pillow to the ground. How oft, indeed,
We've sent our souls out from the rigid north,
On bare white feet which would not print nor bleed,
To climb the Alpine passes and look forth,
Where booming low the Lombard rivers lead
To gardens, vineyards, all a dream is worth,—
Sights, thou and I, Love, have seen afterward
From Tuscan Bellosguardo, wide awake,*
When, standing on the actual blessed sward
Where Galileo stood at nights to take
The vision of the stars, we have found it hard,
Gazing upon the earth and heaven, to make
A choice of beauty.

Therefore let us all
Refreshed in England or in other land,
By visions, with their fountain-rise and fall,

* Galileo's villa, close to Florence, is built on an eminence called Bellosguardo.

Of this earth's darling,—we, who understand
A little how the Tuscan musical
Vowels do round themselves as if they planned
Eternities of separate sweetness,—we,
Who loved Sorrento vines in picture-book,
Or ere in wine-cup we pledged faith or glee,—
Who loved Rome's wolf with demi-gods at suck,
Or ere we loved truth's own divinity,—
Who loved, in brief, the classic hill and brook,
And Ovid's dreaming tales and Petrarch's song,
Or ere we loved Love's self even,—let us give
The blessing of our souls, (and wish them strong
To bear it to the height where prayers arrive,
When faithful spirits pray against a wrong,)
To this great cause of southern men who strive
In God's name for man's rights, and shall not fail!

Behold, they shall not fail. The shouts ascend
Above the shrieks, in Naples, and prevail.
Rows of shot corpses, waiting for the end
Of burial, seem to smile up straight and pale
Into the azure air and apprehend
That final gun-flash from Palermo's coast
Which lightens their apocalypse of death.
So let them die! The world shows nothing lost;
Therefore, not blood. Above or underneath,
What matter, brothers, if ye keep your post
On duty's side? As sword returns to sheath,
So dust to grave, but souls find place in Heaven.

Heroic daring is the true success,
 The eucharistic bread requires no leaven ;
 And though your ends were hopeless, we should bless
 Your cause as holy. Strive—and, having striven,
 Take, for God's recompense, that righteousness !

PART II.

I WROTE a meditation and a dream,
 Hearing a little child sing in the street :
 I leant upon his music as a theme,
 Till it gave way beneath my heart's full beat
 Which tried at an exultant prophecy
 But dropped before the measure was complete—
 Alas, for songs and hearts ! O Tuscany,
 O Dante's Florence, is the type too plain ?
 Didst thou, too, only sing of liberty
 As little children take up a high strain
 With unintentioned voices, and break off
 To sleep upon their mothers' knees again ?
 Couldst thou not watch one hour ? then, sleep enough—
 That sleep may hasten manhood and sustain
 The faint pale spirit with some muscular stuff.

But we, who cannot slumber as thou dost,
 We thinkers, who have thought for thee and failed,
 We hopers, who have hoped for thee and lost,

We poets, wandered round by dreams,* who hailed
From this Atrides' roof (with lintel-post
Which still drips blood,—the worse part hath prevailed)
The fire-voice of the beacons to declare
Troy taken, sorrow ended,—cozened through
A crimson sunset in a misty air,
What now remains for such as we, to do?
God's judgments, peradventure, will He bare
To the roots of thunder, if we kneel and sue?

From Casa Guidi windows I looked forth,
And saw ten thousand eyes of Florentines
Flash back the triumph of the Lombard north,—
Saw fifty banners, freighted with the signs
And exultations of the awakened earth,
Float on above the multitude in lines,
Straight to the Pitti. So, the vision went.
And so, between those populous rough hands
Raised in the sun, Duke Leopold outleant,
And took the patriot's oath which henceforth stands
Among the oaths of perjurers, eminent
To catch the lightnings ripened for these lands.

Why swear at all, thou false Duke Leopold?
What need to swear? What need to boast thy blood
Unspoilt of Austria, and thy heart unsold
Away from Florence? It was understood
God made thee not too vigorous or too bold;

* See the opening passage of the Agamemnon of Æschylus.

And men had patience with thy quiet mood,
And women, pity, as they saw thee pace
Their festive streets with premature grey hairs.
We turned the mild dejection of thy face
To princely meanings, took thy wrinkling cares
For ruffling hopes, and called thee weak, not base.
Nay, better light the torches for more prayers
And smoke the pale Madonnas at the shrine,
Being still 'our poor Grand-duke, our good Grand-duke,
'Who cannot help the Austrian in his line,'—
Than write an oath upon a nation's book
For men to spit at with scorn's blurring brine!
Who dares forgive what none can overlook?

For me, I do repent me in this dust
Of towns and temples which makes Italy,—
I sigh amid the sighs which breathe a gust
Of dying century to century
Around us on the uneven crater-crust
Of these old worlds,—I bow my soul and knee.
Absolve me, patriots, of my woman's fault
That ever I believed the man was true!
These sceptred strangers shun the common salt,
And, therefore, when the general board's in view
And they stand up to carve for blind and halt,
The wise suspect the viands which ensue.
I much repent that, in this time and place
Where many corpse-lights of experience burn
From Cæsar's and Lorenzo's festering race,

To enlighten groping reasoners, I could learn

No better counsel for a simple case

Than to put faith in princes, in my turn.

Had all the death-piles of the ancient years
Flared up in vain before me? knew I not

What stench arises from some purple gears?
And how the sceptres witness whence they got

Their briar-wood, crackling through the atmosphere's
Foul smoke, by princely perjuries, kept hot?

Forgive me, ghosts of patriots,—Brutus, thou,
Who trailest downhill into life again

Thy blood-weighed cloak, to indict me with thy slow
Reproachful eyes!—for being taught in vain

That, while the illegitimate Cæsars show
Of meaner stature than the first full strain,

(Confessed incompetent to conquer Gaul)
They swoon as feebly and cross Rubicons

As rashly as any Julius of them all!
Forgive, that I forgot the mind which runs

Through absolute races, too unsceptical!
I saw the man among his little sons,

His lips were warm with kisses while he swore;
And I, because I am a woman, I,

Who felt my own child's coming life before
The prescience of my soul, and held faith high,—

I could not bear to think, whoever bore,
That lips, so warmed, could shape so cold a lie.

From Casa Guidi windows I looked out,

Again looked, and beheld a different sight.

The Duke had fled before the people's shout
'Long live the Duke!' A people, to speak right,
Must speak as soft as courtiers, lest a doubt
Should curdle brows of gracious sovereigns, white.

Moreover that same dangerous shouting meant
Some gratitude for future favours, which

Were only promised, the Constituent
Implied, the whole being subject to the hitch

In 'motu proprios,' very incident
To all these Czars, from Paul to Paulovitch.

Whereat the people rose up in the dust
Of the ruler's flying feet, and shouted still
And loudly; only, this time, as was just,
Not 'Live the Duke,' who had fled for good or ill,
But 'Live the People,' who remained and must,
The unrenounced and unrenounceable.

Long live the people! How they lived! and boiled
And bubbled in the cauldron of the street:

How the young blustered, nor the old recoiled,
And what a thunderous stir of tongues and feet

Trod flat the palpitating bells and foiled
The joy-guns of their echo, shattering it!

How down they pulled the Duke's arms everywhere!
How up they set new café-signs, to show

Where patriots might sip ices in pure air—
(The fresh paint smelling somewhat)! To and fro
How marched the civic guard, and stopped to stare

When boys broke windows in a civic glow!

How rebel songs were sung to loyal tunes,
And bishops cursed in ecclesiastic metres:

How all the Circoli grew large as moons,
And all the speakers, moonstruck,—thankful greeters

Of prospects which struck poor the ducal boons,
A mere free Press, and Chambers!—frank repeaters

Of great Guerazzi's praises—'There's a man,
The father of the land, who, truly great,

Takes off that national disgrace and ban,
The farthing tax upon our Florence-gate,

And saves Italia as he only can!'

How all the nobles fled, and would not wait,

Because they were most noble,—which being so,
How liberals vowed to burn their palaces,

Because free Tuscans were not free to go!

How grown men raged at Austria's wickedness,

And smoked,—while fifty striplings in a row
Marched straight to Piedmont for the wrong's redress!

You say we failed in duty, we who wore
Black velvet like Italian democrats,

Who slashed our sleeves like patriots, nor forswore
The true republic in the form of hats?

We chased the archbishop from the Duomo-door,
We chalked the walls with bloody caveats

Against all tyrants. If we did not fight
Exactly, we fired muskets up the air

To show that victory was ours of right.

We met, had free discussion everywhere

(Except perhaps i' the Chambers) day and night.
 We proved the poor should be employed, ... that's fair,—
 And yet the rich not worked for anywise,—
 Pay certified, yet payers abrogated,—
 Full work secured, yet liabilities
 To over-work excluded,—not one bated
 Of all our holidays, that still, at twice
 Or thrice a week, are moderately rated.
 We proved that Austria was dislodged, or would
 Or should be, and that Tuscany in arms
 Should, would dislodge her, ending the old feud;
 And yet, to leave our piazzas, shops, and farms,
 For the simple sake of fighting, was not good—
 We proved that also. 'Did we carry charms
 Against being killed ourselves, that we should rush
 On killing others? what, desert herewith
 Our wives and mothers?—was that duty? tush!'—
 At which we shook the sword within the sheath
 Like heroes—only louder; and the flush
 Ran up the cheek to meet the future wreath.
 Nay, what we proved, we shouted—how we shouted,
 (Especially the boys did) boldly planting
 That tree of liberty, whose fruit is doubted,
 Because the roots are not of nature's granting!
 A tree of good and evil: none, without it,
 Grow gods; alas and, with it, men are wanting!

 O holy knowledge, holy liberty,
 O holy rights of nations! If I speak

These bitter things against the jugglery
Of days that in your names proved blind and weak,
It is that tears are bitter. When we see
The brown skulls grin at death in churchyards bleak,
We do not cry, 'This Yorick is too light,'
For death grows deathlier with that mouth he makes.
So with my mocking: bitter things I write
Because my soul is bitter for your sakes,
O freedom! O my Florence!

Men who might
Do greatly in a universe that breaks
And burns, must ever know before they do.
Courage and patience are but sacrifice;
And sacrifice is offered for and to Something conceived of. Each man pays a price
For what himself counts precious, whether true
Or false the appreciation it implies.
But here,—no knowledge, no conception, nought!
Desire was absent, that provides great deeds
From out the greatness of prevenient thought:
And action, action, like a flame that needs
A steady breath and fuel, being caught
Up, like a burning reed from other reeds,
Flashed in the empty and uncertain air,
Then wavered, then went out. Behold, who blames
A crooked course, when not a goal is there
To round the fervid striving of the games?
An ignorance of means may minister

To greatness; but an ignorance of aims
Makes it impossible to be great at all.
So, with our Tuscans! Let none dare to say,
‘Here virtue never can be national;
Here fortitude can never cut a way
Between the Austrian muskets, out of thrall:
I tell you rather that, whoever may
Discern true ends here, shall grow pure enough
To love them, brave enough to strive for them,
And strong to reach them though the roads be rough:
That having learnt—by no mere apophthegm—
Not just the draping of a graceful stuff
About a statue, broidered at the hem,—
Not just the trilling on an opera-stage
Of ‘libertà’ to bravos—(a fair word,
Yet too allied to inarticulate rage
And breathless sobs, for singing, though the chord
Were deeper than they struck it) but the gauge
Of civil wants sustained and wrongs abhorred,
The serious sacred meaning and full use
Of freedom for a nation,—then, indeed,
Our Tuscans, underneath the bloody dew
Of some new morning, rising up agreed
And bold, will want no Saxon souls or thews
To sweep their piazzas clear of Austria’s breed.

Alas, alas! it was not so this time.
Conviction was not, courage failed, and truth
Was something to be doubted of. The mime

Changed masks, because a mime. The tide as smooth

In running in as out, no sense of crime
Because no sense of virtue,—sudden ruth

Seized on the people: they would have again
Their good Grand-duke and leave Guerazzi, though
He took that tax from Florence. ‘Much in vain
He takes it from the market-carts, we throw,

While urgent that no market-men remain,
But all march off and leave the spade and plough,

To die among the Lombards. Was it thus
The dear paternal Duke did? Live the Duke!’

At which the joy-bells multitudinous,
Swept by an opposite wind, as loudly shook.

Call back the mild archbishop to his house,
To bless the people with his frightened look,—

He shall not yet be hanged, you comprehend!
Seize on Guerazzi; guard him in full view,

Or else we stab him in the back, to end!
Rub out those chalked devices, set up new

The Duke’s arms, doff your Phrygian caps, and mend

The pavement of the piazzas broke into

By barren poles of freedom: smooth the way
For the ducal carriage, lest his highness sigh

‘Here trees of liberty grew yesterday!’

‘Long live the Duke!’—how roared the cannonry,

How rocked the bell-towers, and through thickening spray

Of nosegays, wreaths, and kerchiefs tossed on high,

How marched the civic guard, the people still Being good at shouts, especially the boys!

Alas, poor people, of an unfledged will
Most fitly expressed by such a callow voice!

Alas, still poorer Duke, incapable
Of being worthy even of so much noise!

You think he came back instantly, with thanks
And tears in his faint eyes, and hands extended
To stretch the franchise through their utmost ranks?
That having, like a father, apprehended,

He came to pardon fatherly those pranks
Played out and now in filial service ended?—

That some love-token, like a prince, he threw
To meet the people's love-call, in return?

Well, how he came I will relate to you;
And if your hearts should burn, why, hearts must burn,
To make the ashes which things old and new
Shall be washed clean in—as this Duke will learn.

From Casa Guidi windows gazing, then,
I saw and witness how the Duke came back.

The regular tramp of horse and tread of men
Did smite the silence like an anvil black

And sparkless. With her wide eyes at full strain,
Our Tuscan nurse exclaimed, 'Alack, alack,

Signora! these shall be the Austrians.' 'Nay,
Be still,' I answered, 'do not wake the child!'

—For so, my two-months' baby sleeping lay

In milky dreams upon the bed and smiled,

And I thought, 'he shall sleep on, while he may,
Through the world's baseness : not being yet defiled,

Why should he be disturbed by what is done ?'

Then, gazing, I beheld the long-drawn street

Live out, from end to end, full in the sun,
With Austria's thousand ; sword and bayonet,

Horse, foot, artillery,—cannons rolling on
Like blind slow storm-clouds gestant with the heat

Of undeveloped lightnings, each bestrode
By a single man, dust-white from head to heel,

Indifferent as the dreadful thing he rode,
Like a sculptured Fate serene and terrible.

As some smooth river which has overflowed,
Will slow and silent down its current wheel

A loosened forest, all the pines erect,
So swept, in mute significance of storm,

The marshalled thousands ; not an eye deflect
To left or right, to catch a novel form

Of Florence city adorned by architect
And carver, or of Beauties live and warm

Scared at the casements,—all, straightforward eyes
And faces, held as steadfast as their swords,

And cognizant of acts, not imageries.

The key, O Tuscans, too well fits the wards !

Ye asked for mimes,—these bring you tragedies :
For purple,—these shall wear it as your lords.

Ye played like children,—die like innocents.
Ye mimicked lightnings with a torch,—the crack

Of the actual bolt, your pastime circumvents.
Ye called up ghosts, believing they were slack
To follow any voice from Gilboa's tents, . .
Here's Samuel!—and, so, Grand-dukes come back!

And yet, they are no prophets though they come:
That awful mantle, they are drawing close,
Shall be searched, one day, by the shafts of Doom
Through double folds now hoodwinking the brows.

Resuscitated monarchs disentomb
Grave-reptiles with them, in their new life-throes.

Let such beware. Behold, the people waits,
Like God: as He, in His serene of might,
So they, in their endurance of long straits.

Ye stamp no nation out, though day and night
Ye tread them with that absolute heel which grates
And grinds them flat from all attempted height.

You kill worms sooner with a garden-spade
Than you kill peoples: peoples will not die;
The tail curls stronger when you lop the head:
They writhe at every wound and multiply

And shudder into a heap of life that's made
Thus vital from God's own vitality.

'Tis hard to shrivel back a day of God's
Once fixed for judgment; 'tis as hard to change

The peoples, when they rise beneath their loads
And heave them from their backs with violent wrench

To crush the oppressor: for that judgment-rod's
The measure of this popular revenge.

Meanwhile, from Casa Guidi windows, we Beheld the armament of Austria flow

Into the drowning heart of Tuscany :

And yet none wept, none cursed, or, if 'twas so,

They wept and cursed in silence. Silently

Our noisy Tuscans watched the invading foe ;

They had learnt silence. Pressed against the wall,

And grouped upon the church-steps opposite,

A few pale men and women stared at all.

God knows what they were feeling, with their white

Constrained faces, they, so prodigal

Of cry and gesture when the world goes right,

Or wrong indeed. But here was depth of wrong,
And here, still water ; they were silent here ;

And through that sentient silence, struck along
That measured tramp from which it stood out clear,

Distinct the sound and silence, like a gong
At midnight, each by the other awfuller,—

While every soldier in his cap displayed
A leaf of olive. Dusty, bitter thing !

Was such plucked at Novara, is it said ?

A cry is up in England, which doth ring

The hollow world through, that for ends of trade
And virtue and God's better worshipping,

We henceforth should exalt the name of Peace
And leave those rusty wars that eat the soul,—

Besides their clippings at our golden fleece.

I, too, have loved peace, and from bole to bole

Of immemorial undeciduous trees
Would write, as lovers use upon a scroll,
The holy name of Peace and set it high
Where none could pluck it down. On trees, I say,—
Not upon gibbets!—With the greenery
Of dewy branches and the flowery May,
Sweet mediation betwixt earth and sky
Providing, for the shepherd's holiday.
Not upon gibbets! though the vulture leaves
The bones to quiet, which he first picked bare.
Not upon dungeons! though the wretch who grieves
And groans within, less stirs the outer air
Than any little field-mouse stirs the sheaves.
Not upon chain-bolts! though the slave's despair
Has dulled his helpless miserable brain
And left him blank beneath the freeman's whip
To sing and laugh out idiocies of pain.
Nor yet on starving homes! where many a lip
Has sobbed itself asleep through curses vain.
I love no peace which is not fellowship
And which includes not mercy. I would have Rather the raking of the guns across
The world, and shrieks against Heaven's architrave;
Rather the struggle in the slippery fosse
Of dying men and horses, and the wave
Blood-bubbling. . . . Enough said!—by Christ's own cross,
And by this faint heart of my womanhood,
Such things are better than a Peace that sits

Beside a hearth in self-commended mood,
And takes no thought how wind and rain by fits
Are howling out of doors against the good
Of the poor wanderer. What! your peace admits
Of outside anguish while it keeps at home?
I loathe to take its name upon my tongue.

'Tis nowise peace; 'tis treason, stiff with doom,—
'Tis gagged despair and inarticulate wrong,
Annihilated Poland, stifled Rome,
Dazed Naples, Hungary fainting 'neath the thong,
And Austria wearing a smooth olive-leaf
On her brute forehead, while her hoofs outpress
The life from these Italian souls, in brief.
O Lord of Peace, who art Lord of Righteousness,
Constrain the anguished worlds from sin and grief,
Pierce them with conscience, purge them with redress,
And give us peace which is no counterfeit!

But wherefore should we look out any more
From Casa Guidi windows? Shut them straight,
And let us sit down by the folded door,
And veil our saddened faces and, so, wait
What next the judgment-heavens make ready for.
I have grown too weary of these windows. Sights
Come thick enough and clear enough in thought,
Without the sunshine; souls have inner lights.
And since the Grand-duke has come back and brought
This army of the North which thus requites
His filial South, we leave him to be taught.

His South, too, has learnt something certainly,
Whereof the practice will bring profit soon ;
And peradventure other eyes may see,
From Casa Guidi windows, what is done
Or undone. Whatsoever deeds they be,
Pope Pius will be glorified in none.

Record that gain, Mazzini !—it shall top
Some heights of sorrow. Peter's rock, so named,
Shall lure no vessel any more to drop
Among the breakers. Peter's chair is shamed
Like any vulgar throne the nations lop
To pieces for their firewood unreclaimed,—
And, when it burns too, we shall see as well
In Italy as elsewhere. Let it burn.
The cross, accounted still adorable,
Is Christ's cross only !—if the thief's would earn
Some stealthy genuflexions, we rebel ;
And here the impenitent thief's has had its turn,
As God knows ; and the people on their knees
Scoff and toss back the crosiers stretched like yokes
To press their heads down lower by degrees.
So Italy, by means of these last strokes,
Escapes the danger which preceded these,
Of leaving captured hands in cloven oaks,—
Of leaving very souls within the buckle
Whence bodies struggled outward,—of supposing That freemen may like bondsmen kneel and truckle,

And then stand up as usual, without losing
An inch of stature.

Those whom she-wolves suckle
Will bite as wolves do in the grapple-closing
Of adverse interests. This at last is known,
(Thank Pius for the lesson) that albeit

Among the popedom's hundred heads of stone
Which blink down on you from the roof's retreat

In Siena's tiger-striped cathedral, Joan
And Borgia 'mid their fellows you may greet,

A harlot and a devil,—you will see
Not a man, still less angel, grandly set

With open soul to render man more free.
The fishers are still thinking of the net,

And, if not thinking of the hook too, we
Are counted somewhat deeply in their debt;

But that's a rare case—so, by hook and crook
They take the advantage, agonizing Christ

By rustier nails than those of Cedron's brook,
I' the people's body very cheaply priced,—

And quote high priesthood out of Holy book,
While buying death-fields with the sacrificed.

Priests, priests,—there's no such name!—God's own, except

Ye take most vainly. Through heaven's lifted gate

The priestly ephod in sole glory swept
When Christ ascended, entered in, and sate
(With victor face sublimely overwept)

At Deity's right hand, to mediate
He alone, He for ever. On His breast
The Urim and the Thummim, fed with fire
From the full Godhead, flicker with the unrest
Of human pitiful heartbeats. Come up higher,
All Christians! Levi's tribe is dispossessed.
That solitary alb ye shall admire,
But not cast lots for. The last chrism, poured right
Was on that Head, and poured for burial
And not for domination in men's sight.
What are these churches? The old temple-wall
Doth overlook them juggling with the sleight
Of surplice, candlestick and altar-pall;
East church and west church, ay, north church and south,
Rome's church and England's,—let them all repent,
And make concordats 'twixt their soul and mouth,
Succeed St. Paul by working at the tent,
Become infallible guides by speaking truth,
And excommunicate their pride that bent
And cramped the souls of men.

Why, even here,
Priestcraft burns out, the twinéd linen blazes;
Not, like asbestos, to grow white and clear,
But all to perish!—while the fire-smell raises
To life some swooning spirits who, last year,
Lost breath and heart in these church-stifled places.
Why, almost, through this Pius, we believed
The priesthood could be an honest thing, he smiled

So saintly while our corn was being sheaved
For his own granaries! Showing now defiled

His hireling hands, a better help's achieved
Than if they blessed us shepherd-like and mild.

False doctrine, strangled by its own amen,
Dies in the throat of all this nation. Who

Will speak a pope's name as they rise again?
What woman or what child will count him true?

What dreamer, praise him with the voice or pen?
What man, fight for him?—Pius takes his due.

Record that gain, Mazzini!—Yes, but first
Set down thy people's faults; set down the want

Of soul-conviction; set down aims dispersed,
And incoherent means, and valour scant

Because of scanty faith, and schisms accursed
That wrench these brother-hearts from covenant

With freedom and each other. Set down this,
And this, and see to overcome it when

The seasons bring the fruits thou wilt not miss
If wary. Let no cry of patriot men

Distract thee from the stern analysis
Of masses who cry only! keep thy ken

Clear as thy soul is virtuous. Heroes' blood
Splashed up against thy noble brow in Rome;

Let such not blind thee to an interlude
Which was not also holy, yet did come

'Twixt sacramental actions,—brotherhood
Despised even there, and something of the doom

Of Remus in the trenches. Listen now—
Rossi died silent near where Cæsar died.

He did not say, 'My Brutus, is it thou?'
But Italy unquestioned testified,

'I killed him! I am Brutus.—I avow.'
At which the whole world's laugh of scorn replied,
'A poor maimed copy of Brutus!'

Too much like,
Indeed, to be so unlike! too unskilled

At Philippi and the honest battle-pike,
To be so skilful where a man is killed

Near Pompey's statue, and the daggers strike
At unawares i' the throat. Was thus fulfilled

An omen once of Michel Angelo?—

When Marcus Brutus he conceived complete,
And strove to hurl him out by blow on blow
Upon the marble, at Art's thunderheat,

Till haply (some pre-shadow rising slow
Of what his Italy would fancy meet

To be called BRUTUS) straight his plastic hand
Fell back before his prophet-soul, and left

A fragment, a maimed Brutus,—but more grand
Than this, so named at Rome, was!

Let thy weft
Present one woof and warp, Mazzini! Stand
With no man hankering for a dagger's heft,
No, not for Italy!—nor stand apart,
No, not for the Republic!—from those pure
Brave men who hold the level of thy heart

In patriot truth, as lover and as doer,
Albeit they will not follow where thou art
As extreme theorist. Trust and distrust fewer ;
And so bind strong and keep unstained the cause
Which (God's sign granted) war-trumps newly blown
Shall yet annunciate to the world's applause.

But now, the world is busy ; it has grown
A Fair-going world. Imperial England draws
The flowing ends of the earth from Fez, Canton,
Delhi and Stockholm, Athens and Madrid,
The Russias and the vast Americas,
As if a queen drew in her robes amid
Her golden cincture,—isles, peninsulas,
Capes, continents, far inland countries hid
By jasper-sands and hills of chrysopras,
All trailing in their splendours through the door
Of the gorgeous Crystal Palace. Every nation,
To every other nation strange of yore,
Gives face to face the civic salutation,
And holds up in a proud right hand before
That congress the best work which she can fashion
By her best means. ' These corals, will you please
To match against your oaks ? They grow as fast
Within my wilderness of purple seas.'—
' This diamond stared upon me as I passed
(As a live god's eye from a marble frieze)
Along a dark of diamonds. Is it classed ? '—
' I wove these stuffs so subtly that the gold

Swims to the surface of the silk like cream
 And curdles to fair patterns. Ye behold !'—
 'These delicatest muslins rather seem
 Than be, you think ? Nay, touch them and be bold,
 Though such veiled Chakhi's face in Hafiz' dream.'—
 'These carpets—you walk slow on them like kings,
 Inaudible like spirits, while your foot
 Dips deep in velvet roses and such things.'—
 'Even Apollonius might commend this flute :*
 The music, winding through the stops, upsprings
 To make the player very rich : compute !'
 'Here's goblet-glass, to take in with your wine
 The very sun its grapes were ripened under :
 Drink light and juice together, and each fine.'—
 'This model of a steam-ship moves your wonder ?
 You should behold it crushing down the brine
 Like a blind Jove who feels his way with thunder.'—
 'Here's sculpture ! Ah, we live too ! why not throw
 Our life into our marbles ? Art has place
 For other artists after Angelo.'—
 'I tried to paint out here a natural face ;
 For nature includes Raffael, as we know,
 Not Raffael nature. Will it help my case ?'—
 'Methinks you will not match this steel of ours !'—
 'Nor you this porcelain ! One might dream the clay

* Philostratus relates of Apollonius how he objected to the musical instrument of Linus the Rhodian, that it could not enrich or beautify. The history of music in our day would satisfy the philosopher on one point at least.

Retained in it the larvæ of the flowers,
They bud so, round the cup, the old Spring-way.'—
'Nor you these carven woods, where birds in bowers
With twisting snakes and climbing cupids, play.'

O Magi of the east and of the west,
Your incense, gold and myrrh are excellent!—
What gifts for Christ, then, bring ye with the rest?
Your hands have worked well: is your courage spent
In handwork only? Have you nothing best,
Which generous souls may perfect and present,
And He shall thank the givers for? no light
Of teaching, liberal nations, for the poor
Who sit in darkness when it is not night?
No cure for wicked children? Christ,—no cure!
No help for women sobbing out of sight
Because men made the laws? no brothel-lure
Burnt out by popular lightnings? Hast thou found
No remedy, my England, for such woes?
No outlet, Austria, for the scourged and bound,
No entrance for the exiled? no repose,
Russia, for knouted Poles worked underground,
And gentle ladies bleached among the snows?
No mercy for the slave, America?
No hope for Rome, free France, chivalric France?
Alas, great nations have great shames, I say.
No pity, O world, no tender utterance
Of benediction, and prayers stretched this way
For poor Italia, baffled by mischance?

O gracious nations, give some ear to me !
You all go to your Fair, and I am one
Who at the roadside of humanity
Beseech your alms,—God's justice to be done.
So, prosper !

In the name of Italy,
Meantime, her patriot Dead have benison.
They only have done well ; and, what they did
Being perfect, it shall triumph. Let them slumber :
No king of Egypt in a pyramid
Is safer from oblivion, though he number
Full seventy cerements for a coverlid.
These Dead be seeds of life, and shall encumber
The sad heart of the land until it loose
The clammy clods and let out the Spring-growth
In beatific green through every bruise.
The tyrant should take heed to what he doth,
Since every victim-carrion turns to use,
And drives a chariot, like a god made wroth,
Against each piled injustice. Ay, the least,
Dead for Italia, not in vain has died ;
Though many vainly, ere life's struggle ceased,
To mad dissimilar ends have swerved aside ;
Each grave her nationality has pieced
By its own majestic breadth, and fortified
And pinned it deeper to the soil. Forlorn
Of thanks be, therefore, no one of these graves !
Not Hers,—who, at her husband's side, in scorn,

Outfaced the whistling shot and hissing waves,
Until she felt her little babe unborn
Recoil, within her, from the violent staves
And bloodhounds of the world,—at which, her life
Dropt inwards from her eyes and followed it
Beyond the hunters. Garibaldi's wife
And child died so. And now, the sea-weeds fit
Her body, like a proper shroud and coif,
And murmurously the ebbing waters grit
The little pebbles while she lies interred
In the sea-sand. Perhaps, ere dying thus,
She looked up in his face (which never stirred
From its clenched anguish) as to make excuse
For leaving him for his, if so she erred.
He well remembers that she could not choose.
A memorable grave! Another is
At Genoa. There, a king may fitly lie,
Who, bursting that heroic heart of his
At lost Novara, that he could not die,
(Though thrice into the cannon's eyes for this
He plunged his shuddering steed, and felt the sky
Reel back between the fire-shocks) stripped away
The ancestral ermine ere the smoke had cleared,
And, naked to the soul, that none might say
His kingship covered what was base and bleared
With treason, went out straight an exile, yea,
An exiled patriot. Let him be revered.

Yea, verily, Charles Albert has died well;

And if he lived not all so, as one spoke,
The sin pass softly with the passing-bell:
For he was shriven, I think, in cannon-smoke,
And, taking off his crown, made visible
A hero's forehead. Shaking Austria's yoke
He shattered his own hand and heart. 'So best,'
His last words were upon his lonely bed,
'I do not end like popes and dukes at least—
'Thank God for it.' And now that he is dead,
Admitting it is proved and manifest
That he was worthy, with a discrowned head,
To measure heights with patriots, let them stand
Beside the man in his Oporto shroud,
And each vouchsafe to take him by the hand,
And kiss him on the cheek, and say aloud,—
'Thou, too, hast suffered for our native land!
My brother, thou art one of us! be proud.'

Still, graves, when Italy is talked upon.
Still, still, the patriot's tomb, the stranger's hate.
Still Niobe! still fainting in the sun,
By whose most dazzling arrows violate
Her beauteous offspring perished! has she won
Nothing but garlands for the graves, from Fate?
Nothing but death-songs?—Yes, be it understood
Life throbs in noble Piedmont! while the feet
Of Rome's clay image, dabbled soft in blood,
Grow flat with dissolution and, as meet,
Will soon be shovelled off like other mud,

To leave the passage free in church and street.

And I, who first took hope up in this song,
Because a child was singing one . . . behold,

The hope and omen were not, haply, wrong !
Poets are soothsayers still, like those of old

Who studied flights of doves ; and creatures young
And tender, mighty meanings, may unfold.

The sun strikes, through the windows, up the floor ;
Stand out in it, my own young Florentine,

Not two years old, and let me see thee more !
It grows along thy amber curls, to shine

Brighter than elsewhere. Now, look straight before,
And fix thy brave blue English eyes on mine,

And from my soul, which fronts the future so,
With unabashed and unabated gaze,

Teach me to hope for, what the angels know
When they smile clear as thou dost. Down God's ways

With just alighted feet, between the snow
And snowdrops, where a little lamb may graze,

Thou hast no fear, my lamb, about the road,
Albeit in our vain-glory we assume

That, less than we have, thou hast learnt of God.
Stand out, my blue-eyed prophet !—thou, to whom

The earliest world-day light that ever flowed,
Through Casa Guidi Windows chanced to come !

Now shake the glittering nimbus of thy hair,
And be God's witness that the elemental

New springs of life are gushing everywhere

To cleanse the water-courses, and prevent all
 Concrete obstructions which infest the air!
 That earth's alive, and gentle or ungentle
 Motions within her, signify but growth!—
 The ground swells greenest o'er the labouring moles.

Howe'er the uneasy world is vexed and wroth,
 Young children, lifted high on parent souls,
 Look round them with a smile upon the mouth,
 And take for music every bell that tolls;
 (Who said we should be better if like these?)
 But we sit murmuring for the future though
 Posterity is smiling on our knees,
 Convicting us of folly. Let us go—
 We will trust God. The blank interstices
 Men take for ruins, He will build into
 With pillared marbles rare, or knit across
 With generous arches, till the fane's complete.
 This world has no perdition, if some loss.

Such cheer I gather from thy smiling, Sweet!
 The self-same cherub-faces which emboss
 The Vail, lean inward to the Mercy-seat.

THE END.
